Communist Plot To Seize Control In Peru Smashed

TRIAL MAY BE LATER

U.S. Court Sets Barnett Hearing For February 8

NEW ORLEANS (AP)— A federal appeals court ordered Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett and Lt. Gov. Paul B. Johnson Jr., Saturday to show cause here Feb. 8 why they should not be held in criminal contempt for blocking Negro James H. Meredith's admission to the University of Mississippi.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, in an order signed by six of its nine judges, said it would try the two officials at a later date if they pleaded innocent or showed other cause at that time.

PENALTIES STIFF

If they fail to appear to answer the four counts charged by the federal government, the two could be found guilty immediately and sentenced to heavy fines and-or imprisonment.

Penalties in criminal contempt cases, regarded as punishment for past actions, are almost unlimited and are usually at the discretion of the judges.

By Saturday's action, the appeals court kept firmly in its own hands the case against the two officials, charged with four specific acts designed to keep Meredith out of the university.

He was finally enrolled at Ole Miss on Oct. 1, backed by thousands of bayonet-wielding federal troops who moved onto the university's campus at Oxford after rioting greeted his arrival. Two died and scores were wounded.

The charges against the two officials specifically accused them of violating a temporary restraining order, issued by the appeals court Sept. 25, which forbade interference with the court's directive for the university to register Meredith.

Barnett and Johnson were both convicted — in absentia — of civil contempt. Barnett drew a $10,000 daily fine and Johnson a $5,000 daily fine, but neither penalty has been imposed.

Civil contempt action is an attempt to prevent violation—mainly in the future—of a court order, while criminal contempt is action for past defiance.

The appeals court on Nov. 15 directed U.S. Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy to file the criminal charges. They were filed here Dec. 21.

The next day, Atty. Gen. Kennedy named Leon Jaworski of Houston, Tex., president of the State Bar of Texas, as special prosecutor in the case.

NATO Meet On Nuclear Forces Due

Kennedy Envoy Flying To Paris For Vital Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Undersecretary of State George W. Ball, one of President Kennedy's top diplomats, will fly to Paris Wednesday to open far-reaching Treaty Organization on formation of an Allied nuclear force for Europe.

Kennedy feels that basic decisions on whether NATO is to have such a force, following up his Polaris missile agreement with British Prime Minister Macmillan last month, will be made this year. The talks to be kicked off by Ball's European trip will probably be the most critical in the recent history of NATO.

DISCUSS PLANS

The President discussed the subject with Secretary of State Dean Rusk and NATO Ambassador Thomas K. Finletter at Palm Beach, Fla., Saturday.

Ball is expected to tell the 15-nation NATO Council that Kennedy is prepared to carry out in the near future the first of the three stages envisioned in last month's U.S.-British Nassau pact. The pact calls for providing the NATO powers with an alliance-controlled, European-based force of Polaris nuclear missiles.

The first step would be the commitment undertaken by Kennedy and Macmillan to make available to NATO strategic bomber forces already in existence. Britain and the United States would supply equal numbers of planes with their nuclear bombs. They would be under direction of the NATO commander, U.S. Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer.

But the NATO allies obviously will have to approve the offer and work out details for the bomber force control system if it is to go through.

Ball will tell the Allied representatives on the council, associates expect, that the Nassau pact represents a great breakthrough toward strengthening the unity of the Western Allies instead of allowing the unchecked development of national nuclear forces, as in Britain and France, to generate forces which would threaten the alliance with disintegration.

Superintendent Of Schools Resigns Post

BASTROP (Special) — The resignation of Morehouse Parish School superintendent, W. C. Hohmann, was accepted by the parish school board Saturday during its regular meeting.

The move by Hohmann, who has served in the position since 1950, was unexpected by board members.

Hohmann will continue to serve as superintendent until June 30, when the resignation becomes effective.

Concerning the action, the 48-year-old Hohmann stated that he felt his "efforts could be used to a better advantage in other areas." He added that he felt like he had "worked diligently in the capacity, but wished to resign as superintendent." He said that he has no future plans at present.

Max Dollar, vice president of the board, made a motion that the board accept the request and the motion was seconded by Jeff Fontenot. The board members then voted unanimously to accept the resignation.

In other action, C. G. Rolfe and Dollar were re-elected president and vice president respectively.

Bernie Turner, recently elected member from Ward 7, was also installed.

Mail Rate Hike Begins Monday

WASHNGTON (AP) — Starting Monday, it will cost you a penny more to mail a letter or a post card.

The higher postal rates will go into effect then. The increases are expected to bring in an extra $600 million.

Most of this will come from a one-cent increase in first class mail, raising the letter rate from 4 to 5 cents an ounce and the post card rate from 3 to 4 cents. The air mail rate will rise from 7 to 8 cents an ounce.

Also being raised are second, third and fourth class rates. Some of these increases will be spread over three years.

Portugese Help In Rearming Of Katanga Forces

KOLWEZI, Katanga (AP)—Portuguese authorities in neighboring Angola are helping President Moise Tshombe rearm for a stand here against U.N. troops, a Katangan Cabinet source said Saturday.

Mercenary units of the Katangan army brought in a train loaded with ammunition and weapons and including four tank cars of gasoline, he said.

The train came from Angola, the Portuguese colony on the west African coast, on the main line that runs from the Angolan port of Lobito, through Kolwezi to Elisabethville, the Katangan capital.

The source said Portuguese administrators in Angola are giving Tshombe every assistance for a continued fight against the United Nations. The source said military supplies for Katanga have been unloaded at Lobito over the past few weeks.

A huge mass of snow slid off Monte Crammont above the village of Pre Saint Didier, barely missing the main road to Courmayeur. Avalanche guards were posted and snowplows were readied in case more avalanches blocked the road.

Drastic ROTC Cuts Proposed By McNamara

WASHINGTON (AP)—A drastic revision and cutback in the Reserve Officer Training Corps program in colleges and high schools will be proposed to the new Congress by defense officials, Senate sources said Saturday.

They reported that Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara advised that the proposal will call for: An end to ROTC programs in high schools; elimination of the present compulsory ROTC programs in all land grant colleges; and reduction of the four-year ROTC courses in most colleges and universities to two years.

Possible savings of several million dollars annually in present ROTC costs are claimed for the revised program by its sponsors.

At present, the Army, Air Force and Navy operate student training programs in numerous educational institutions, supplying uniforms, rifles and other equipment, instructors and, in some cases, drill pay.

Sponsors of the new proposal contend that the armed services have been getting relatively few officers, either career or reserve, from the large numbers of trainees and high costs.

They hope to pattern the two-year officer training program after the Navy's plan for paying tuition and monthly allowances to selected college students in the upper two classes who contract to serve as naval officers for at least three years if they win commissions.

CIVIC IMPROVEMENTS

Evans Is Appointed To Project Position

The Monroe City Council Saturday named Robert H. Evans to administer the $11,250,000 public improvement program approved by property owners last November.

At a meeting attended by Commissioners H. W. McSherry and William Rodriguez, Chamber of Commerce President J. H. Scogin Jr., Grayson Guthrie, executive vice president of the Central Savings Bank, and R. L. Vanderpool, president of the Ouachita National Bank, Mayor W. L. Howard said that the services of an administrator were necessary to carry out a program of such magnitude efficiently.

Howard said that the appointment of Evans to this post had the strong endorsement of the citizens advisory committee concerned with the program.

WELCOMES TASK

Evans said that he welcomed the opportunity to serve the community and his aim would be to see that it received maximum value for every dollar spent. He asked the help of all city officials and departments and foresaw the need to call upon various individual citizens and civic bodies for advice and assistance.

Until recently vice president of Olin Mathieson's packaging division, Evans draws upon 30 years experience in business, finance and government, Mayor Howard said. Residing in Monroe for the past seven years, Evans has been president of the United Givers Fund, president of Monroe Little Theatre and chairman of the Ouachita Civil Defense committee.

Civic and business leaders hailed Evans' appointment to the post as "an excellent choice."

States May Accept New Guard Plan

Governors Give Qualified Okay After Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two spokesmen for the Conference of Governors expressed belief Saturday that most states would accept a new one-step Army plan to shape the National Guard—and the Reserves—on the same pattern as the Regular Army.

The Army said the reorganization should be completed before summer.

PLAN UNVEILED

The plan was unveiled Saturday by Secretary of the Army Cyrus Vance in a meeting with a National Guard committee of the governors, many of whom have been severely critical of previous Pentagon reorganization plans.

But after the meeting with Vance, Gov. Ernest Vandiver of Georgia, the committee's chairman, said he thought a majority of states would accept the new plan with minor adjustments.

His view was echoed by Washington Gov. Albert D. Rosellini, chairman of the Governors' conference executive committee, which was also in session here.

The executive committee also approved the report handed in by the Vandiver committee, which had recommended that each governor has a right to oppose the reorganization plans.

And Vandiver said he knew some governors would, but he wouldn't estimate how many.

The Vandiver group also recommended that the executive committee urge Congress to authorize an average strength of 400,000 for the National Guard. It opposed wording in the present appropriation bill which calls for an "end strength" of 400,000 in 1963.

Exile Leaders Planning New Cuba Attacks

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)— Plans for further hit-and-run attacks against Fidel Castro's Cuba are proceeding, a leader of the second National Front of Escambray, an action group, said Saturday.

Such forays are designed "to destroy the legend that Fidel is invincible," said Maj. Armando Fleites, secretary-general in exile of the group, which has joined forces with another, called Alpha 66.

Forces of the two organizations have made three attacks on Cuba to date, "and there will be more," said Fleites, just returned from a trip to New York, Washington and Philadelphia, where he contacted fellow members.

The last attack, Fleites said, was an invasion of Juan Francisco Beach in Las Villages Province Dec. 4.

Over 300 Held As Suspects In Planned Revolt

LIMA, Peru (AP) — President Ricardo Perez Godoy's military junta announced Saturday it has smashed a vast Communist plot against Peru allegedly masterminded and financed by Moscow, Prague and Havana.

Raiding squads arrested more than 300 persons suspected of taking part in plots said to call for assassination of the chiefs of the armed forces and key industrial leaders.

Civil guarantees were suspended throughout the nation. During the suspension authorities can make arrests and enter private homes without warrants. Public meetings and demonstrations are prohibited. Zonal military commanders took over the conduct of political affairs.

PLOT CRUSHED

The country, however, was reported calm. There was no evidence in the streets of Lima that anything unusual was going on.

The junta said the plot was crushed a few days before Red agents were scheduled to touch off an uprising with hit and run raids across this nation of 10 million, which has been considered a key country in President Kennedy's $20 billion Alliance for Progress program.

A communique said initial targets included airports, bridges, waterworks, radio stations and power plants.

Red arsenals were said to include rifles, bombs, pistols and submachine guns smuggled in from abroad. The junta charged that some weapons had been shipped from Miami, Fla., as

No Morrison Deal Made, --Fitzmorris

New Orleans political leader Councilman James E. Fitzmorris Saturday night denied, in an interview with the Morning World, that a new political group formed in the Crescent City is intended to support former New Orleans Mayor deLesseps Morrison in a campaign for governor this year.

He said the new group, the Crescent Regular Democratic Organization, was not formed to support "any candidate for anything."

DENIES PART

Fitzmorris denied a portion of the story which says that Morrison was a leader in the merger of the two political factions — one of which is the Old Regular organization.

"You can take my word for it that this is definitely not an accurate story. The RDO (Old Regulars) has never even discussed candidates for governor. It's entirely too early."

When questioned as to whether the organization was formed to oppose Gov. Jimmie H. Davis or New Orleans Mayor Victor Schiro, Fitzmorris said it was "not anti-anybody at this time."

Snow, Freezing Rain Spreading Over Midlands

By United Press International

A storm which glazed highways with sleet and freezing rain through the midlands and dropped the first heavy snow of the year on Colorado and Wyoming pushed east toward the Appalachians Saturday.

Colorado and Wyoming were digging out from under as much as 6 inches of snow. Parts of Nebraska got three inches of snow and sections of western Kansas had four inches.

Ice coated roads and streets across northeast Kansas and northern Missouri. Fairview, Kan., reported ice an inch thick on trees and power lines.

Wichita, Kan., measured nearly an inch of rain. The rain belt extended south to Texas, where Fort Worth, had nearly half an inch, and east to Tennessee, where Memphis measured a quarter of an inch.

The freezing line early in the day stretched from central Arizona northeast to Illinois and then southeast to South Carolina.

In the plush Brentwood section of west Los Angeles, Calif., volunteers were filling sandbags and preparing temporary storm sewers to prevent possible heavy rains from doing further damage in an earth slide area where two $60,000 homes have already been destroyed.

REPORT NEW BATTLE MAY EXPLODE

Katangese March On Capital

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, The Congo (UPI) —Katanga Interior Minister Godefroid Munongo—said to be the power behind President Moise Tshombe — has reformed the shattered Katangese gendarmerie and is marching on Elisabethville with 1,000 men, U. N. sources said Saturday.

At the same time Radio Free Katanga said U. N. forces which seized Jadotville earlier this week had resumed their drive on Tshombe's headquarters town of Kolwezi and had driven 40 miles from Jadotville against "fierce resistance." Jadotville is 80 miles from Kolwezi.

The Katanga communique said U. N. troops were stopped between Mulunghishi, 20 miles northwest of Jadotville, and Nguba, 20 miles further on, "by violent battles." U. N. sources indicated earlier their forces had halted at Jadotville to await a Tshombe peace feeler.

U. N. reports said Munongo was marching up from the Northern Rhodesian border.

The development threatened to explode a new round of fighting in the mineral rich province. It came as U. N. Undersecretary Ralph Bunche arrived in Leopoldville and gave the green light for further military operations against Katanga President Moise Tshombe.

Bunche pinpointed three more main military objectives including Tshombe's stronghold at Kolwezi and Sakania. Sakania is located on the border of Northern Rhodesia, 100 miles southeast of Elisabethville, from which the Katangese were reported moving with at least six armored vehicles.

The United Nations sent a civilian train with Red Cross markings down the railway line toward the Sakania area late Saturday to test the reaction of Munongo's gendarmes.

It appeared obvious Bunche was hoping to withhold major U. N. strikes until Secretary General Thant's two-week ultimatum to Tshombe to talk peace or face renewed warfare expires Jan. 14. The new Katangese offensive could change all that, however.

Tshombe has shown no signs of talking peace at the moment.

U. N. reconnaissance aircraft flying over the Sakania area Saturday reported that Munongo has reformed stragglers from the Katangese gendarmerie who were drive out of Elisabethville in a U. N. Christmas offensive and was leading them into battle.

(Northern Rhodesia charged that three Swedish U. N. jet fighters flew deep into Rhodesian territory in the same area. It ordered its own jet air force to patrol the border and halt further incursions.)

The U. N. spotter craft said the Katangese were moving from Sakania and Ushoshi, about 12 miles away, where the Katangese still hold immigration and customs posts. The road is the only route the civilian population can move food, medical supplies and gasoline into Katanga from the south.

The U. N. command said Munongo's forces controlled part of the road and a rail line which runs parallel for 16 miles between Elisabethville and the Northern Rhodesian border.

The central government, meanwhile, flew in officials to Elisabethville to assume control over the administration in a further step to incorporate secessionist Katanga into the Congo government.

In another development aimed at reunification, Marcel Van Roey, director of the National Bank of Katanga, flew into Leopoldville to discuss the Katangese monetary situation and possibly work toward sharing Katanga mining revenues with the central government.

Exile Leaders Planning New Cuba Attacks

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)— Plans for further hit-and-run attacks against Fidel Castro's Cuba are proceeding, a leader of the second National Front of Escambray, an action group, said Saturday.

Such forays are designed "to destroy the legend that Fidel is invincible," said Maj. Armando Fleites, secretary-general in exile of the group, which has joined forces with another, called Alpha 66.

Forces of the two organizations have made three attacks on Cuba to date, "and there will be more," said Fleites, just returned from a trip to New York, Washington and Philadelphia, where he contacted fellow members.

The last attack, Fleites said, was an invasion of Juan Francisco Beach in Las Villages Province Dec. 4.

Over 300 Held As Suspects In Planned Revolt

LIMA, Peru (AP) — President Ricardo Perez Godoy's military junta announced Saturday it has smashed a vast Communist plot against Peru allegedly masterminded and financed by Moscow, Prague and Havana.

Raiding squads arrested more than 300 persons suspected of taking part in plots said to call for assassination of the chiefs of the armed forces and key industrial leaders.

Civil guarantees were suspended throughout the nation. During the suspension authorities can make arrests and enter private homes without warrants. Public meetings and demonstrations are prohibited. Zonal military commanders took over the conduct of political affairs.

PLOT CRUSHED

The country, however, was reported calm. There was no evidence in the streets of Lima that anything unusual was going on.

The junta said the plot was crushed a few days before Red agents were scheduled to touch off an uprising with hit and run raids across this nation of 10 million, which has been considered a key country in President Kennedy's $20 billion Alliance for Progress program.

A communique said initial targets included airports, bridges, waterworks, radio stations and power plants.

Red arsenals were said to include rifles, bombs, pistols and submachine guns smuggled in from abroad. The junta charged that some weapons had been shipped from Miami, Fla., as

No Morrison Deal Made, --Fitzmorris

New Orleans political leader Councilman James E. Fitzmorris Saturday night denied, in an interview with the Morning World, that a new political group formed in the Crescent City is intended to support former New Orleans Mayor deLesseps Morrison in a campaign for governor this year.

He said the new group, the Crescent Regular Democratic Organization, was not formed to support "any candidate for anything."

DENIES PART

Fitzmorris denied a portion of the story which says that Morrison was a leader in the merger of the two political factions — one of which is the Old Regular organization.

"You can take my word for it that this is definitely not an accurate story. The RDO (Old Regulars) has never even discussed candidates for governor. It's entirely too early."

When questioned as to whether the organization was formed to oppose Gov. Jimmie H. Davis or New Orleans Mayor Victor Schiro Fitzmorris said it was "not anti-anybody at this time."

Snow, Freezing Rain Spreading Over Midlands

By United Press International

A storm which glazed highways with sleet and freezing rain through the midlands and dropped the first heavy snow of the year on Colorado and Wyoming pushed east toward the Appalachians Saturday.

Colorado and Wyoming were digging out from under as much as 6 inches of snow. Parts of Nebraska got three inches of snow and sections of western Kansas had four inches.

Ice coated roads and streets across northeast Kansas and northern Missouri. Fairview, Kan., reported ice an inch thick on trees and power lines.

Wichita, Kan., measured nearly an inch of rain. The rain belt extended south to Texas, where Fort Worth, had nearly half an inch, and east to Tennessee, where Memphis measured a quarter of an inch.

The freezing line early in the day stretched from central Arizona northeast to Illinois and then southeast to South Carolina.

In the plush Brentwood section of west Los Angeles, Calif., volunteers were filling sandbags and preparing temporary storm sewers to prevent possible heavy rains from doing further damage in an earth slide area where two $60,000 homes have already been destroyed.

REPORT NEW BATTLE MAY EXPLODE

Katangese March On Capital

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, The Congo (UPI) —Katanga Interior Minister Godefroid Munongo—said to be the power behind President Moise Tshombe — has reformed the shattered Katangese gendarmerie and is marching on Elisabethville with 1,000 men, U. N. sources said Saturday.

At the same time Radio Free Katanga said U. N. forces which seized Jadotville earlier this week had resumed their drive on Tshombe's headquarters town of Kolwezi and had driven 40 miles from Jadotville against "fierce resistance." Jadotville is 80 miles from Kolwezi.

The Katanga communique said U. N. troops were stopped between Mulunghishi, 20 miles northwest of Jadotville, and Nguba, 20 miles further on, "by violent battles." U. N. sources indicated earlier their forces had halted at Jadotville to await a Tshombe peace feeler.

U. N. reports said Munongo was marching up from the Northern Rhodesian border.

The development threatened to explode a new round of fighting in the mineral rich province. It came as U. N. Undersecretary Ralph Bunche arrived in Leopoldville and gave the green light for further military operations against Katanga President Moise Tshombe.

Bunche pinpointed three more main military objectives including Tshombe's stronghold at Kolwezi and Sakania. Sakania is located on the border of Northern Rhodesia, 100 miles southeast of Elisabethville, from which the Katangese were reported moving with at least six armored vehicles.

The United Nations sent a civilian train with Red Cross markings down the railway line toward the Sakania area late Saturday to test the reaction of Munongo's gendarmes.

It appeared obvious Bunche was hoping to withhold major U. N. strikes until Secretary General Thant's two-week ultimatum to Tshombe to talk peace or face renewed warfare expires Jan. 14. The new Katangese offensive could change all that, however.

U. N. reconnaissance aircraft flying over the Sakania area Saturday reported that Munongo has reformed stragglers from the Katangese gendarmerie who were drive out of Elisabethville in a U. N. Christmas offensive and was leading them into battle.

(Northern Rhodesia charged that three Swedish U. N. jet fighters flew deep into Rhodesian territory in the same area. It ordered its own jet air force to patrol the border and halt further incursions.)

The U. N. spotter craft said the Katangese were moving from Sakania and Ushoshi, about 12 miles away, where the Katangese still hold immigration and customs posts. The road is the only route the civilian population can move food, medical supplies and gasoline into Katanga from the south.

The U. N. command said Munongo's forces controlled part of the road and a rail line which runs parallel for 16 miles between Elisabethville and the Northern Rhodesian border.

The central government, meanwhile, flew in officials to Elisabethville to assume control over the administration in a further step to incorporate secessionist Katanga into the Congo government.

In another development aimed at reunification, Marcel Van Roey, director of the National Bank of Katanga, flew into Leopoldville to discuss the Katangese monetary situation and possibly work toward sharing Katanga mining revenues with the central government.

No big rocket buildings will go on an acre. Residents can farm. But no one may live in the buffer zone. NASA says sound waves from rocket blasts could crumble a house.

The ticklish and often heart-rending job of buying the land from people who have lived there all their lives went to Orville B. Moore, a 43-year-old career government worker who has the title of project manager. He heads a real estate team that operates out of nearby Bay St. Louis for the Army Engineers.

Moore started by sending appraisers into the area to evaluate each owner's property. When this was done, negotiators—all Mississippi men, by no accident—sat down with the owners to try to get them to accept the government's price.

If they reach agreement, the government pays them and they get out.

If no agreement is reached, the government files a condemnation proceeding and takes the land anyway. It deposits its cash offer with a federal court, and the owner tries to convince a jury he should get more.

Meanwhile, the judge usually tells him to move out [illegible]

"There are 159 tracts in the test site," Moore said, "ranging from a few acres to 11,258 acres of timberland owned by the International Paper Company."

"Thirty-five of the 159 tracts are being contested over money," Moore said. The government paid the paper company slightly more than $1 million for its land, or about $100 an acre.

Every land owner isn't that fortunate. Mrs. Joe Jones, 68-year-old widow of a former sheriff of Hancock County, says she is leaving her one-acre waterfront homesite in Gainesville without a penny.

Mrs. Jones said the government won't pay her because she can't prove clear title to the land where she lived 32 years and raised eight children. The $18,760 she says the government has offered is tied up in court until she can legally show it's her land.

"The title [illegible] Mrs. M. F. Clark on [illegible]," Mrs. Jones said. "We never heard of her before all this [illegible] we've been trying to find some of the [illegible] but they're not to be found."

A good many people feel the government's terms [illegible] have been fair.

"At first, there was a big furore over land prices," said Charles Notter, publisher of The Picayune Item. Picayune lies on the northern outskirts of the buffer zone. It is due to become one of a half dozen boom towns when the base's workers flock in.

"But the furore died down," Notter said. "The prices the government paid seem pretty well in line."

Moore said his office got together with 70 per cent of the property owners who held 96 per cent of the test site land. But hold-outs and a small group of land owners in the buffer zone are not satisfied.

"The government men are very nice, very courteous," said Cora Pearl Patch, 54, one of Mrs. Loveless' three sisters, "but they say we're looking at this from a sentimental viewpoint. It seems like they don't think our land is worth much. Most of the people who lived in Gainesville were not satisfied."

"All of us respect the owners' sentimental value," real estate boss Moore said. "But what we are concerned with is what this property can bring on the open market. The fact that they have been living there for generations and generations has no material bearing on fair market value."

One of the more outspoken protesters was Dr. J. F. Farguson, a gentleman farmer who owned 300 acres in the buffer zone and who became chairman of the dissident Mississippi Test Facility Property Owners Committee.

For one thing, Dr. Farguson, a white Southerner, felt the government was not giving Negroes a square deal.

"Some of them (the Negroes) have been left completely destitute as the result of the ridiculously low values received for their lands and homes," he said in a letter to the editor published in The New Orleans Times-Picayune.

"We do not discriminate between the white and colored race," Moore said. "Both races are treated fairly."

When Dr. Farguson sold his land and left the area, Asa McQueen, country store owner, took over the committee's top post. His store northwest of Santa Rosa in the buffer zone, where he has built up a big trade for miles around, missed the cutoff line by some 300 feet.

"The government will not add or subtract from what is laid out," McQueen said. "The line goes through a church up the road apiece. They'll have to move the church. At one point, the line cuts down the middle of a road through the Bayou la Croix community. People on one side are outside the buffer zone. They can stay. People on the other side are inside the zone. They have to get out."

"If you get to moving back a line," said Joe B. Graham Jr., 34, chief of the engineers acquisition sections, "where are you going to stop? There is a row of houses back of the homes just inside the buffer zone."

"These fellows are buying land from us at prices as much as 7 years old," Oscar J. Gelpi of the Flat Top community said. "But all around us there's a real estate boom. So what happens when we move is this: the government is paying us $100 an acre, and it's costing us $500 an acre where we're moving."

"We can't pay for what replacement value costs," Graham said, "because there would be no stopping point. Also, a lot of these people are coming from a rural community and moving into a city like Picayune. They're not moving into rural areas comparable to their own. And so they can't expect the price to be the same."

"I'm 60 years old," McQueen said. "I can't start all over in business. I've built a trade for years and years. Now, they're taking my business. They're taking all my customers. And all they're looking at is my real estate."

"No condemning agency can compensate for business losses," Graham said. "That's called 'consequential damages.' There's no way the government can pay for this.

"We—probably more than anyone else—are aware of the hardships these people go through. The hardest job is to soothe people who are disturbed, not necessarily by the price, but by the hardship of leaving, relocating in a new community, a new environment. There's only one explanation we can make—'these things we recognize, we sympathize. But they are not compensable under the law.'"

Slowly, tract by tract, the long process of buying goes on.

Each week another family packs up and leaves. A house full of memories goes down board by board. Or sometimes, you see a house mover inching an old frame dwelling along a piney woods road.

Coffins come up from the Mississippi red clay of Gainesville Cemetery to be reburied in strange graveyards.

Gainesville is gone. By [illegible] 1964, half a dozen more tiny settlements will join it in limbo. The lush woodland that once surrounded these communities will never be the same.

"I was overwhelmed by the beauty of the scenery," Dr. Wernher von Braun, director of NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, said while flying over the land.

"I feel a little sorry over the fact that bulldozers will soon be going over the area and tearing up some of that beauty. . . (BUT) if we didn't come to Gainescille, we'd never get to the moon."

Mississippi Community Is Vanishing Before U.S. Race Toward Moon

GAINESVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Louise Elizabeth Loveless sits in her tin-roofed country home near the banks of the Pearl River and talks about the good old days.

To Mrs. Loveless, they are the days before Washington decided to build a $500 million rocket test center in the sleepy backwoods of southern Mississippi.

The base—a tival link in the race to the moon—is wiping out her home, her country store, and the antebellum town of Gainesville, population of about 100. Everything, even Gainesville's ancient graveyard which existed before Mississippi became a state in 1817, is being uprooted.

In two years, the nearby communities of Logtown, Napoleon, Santa Rosa, Westonia, Bayou la Croux and Flat Top also will become ghost towns, erased from the map to make man's ageless dream of a trip to the moon come true.

"What make it so bad is that we'll be starting all ver," Mrs. Loveless, 56, said. She is one of a half dozen families left in Gainesville. The government says she must get out by Thursday (Jan. 10).

"Everything will be different," she said, strolling in her spacious yard among centuries-old moss hung oaks. "All the old places we love will just be memories.

"Just the other day," she said, "I walked over by the river where we held baptisms. My father was the preacher. I remember the deacons would march the people out into the river. Daddy stood in the water, and we would be on the shore singing hymns while Daddy read scripture. Oh my, it was such a beautiful ceremony."

The land the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is taking consists of 141,000 acres about 220 square miles—of flat, pine timberland and swamp in Hancock and Pearl River counties, Miss., and St. Tammany Parish, La.

On a government map, the rocker area looks like a small circle inside a larger circle.

In the inner circle's 13,000 acres —some 120 miles south of the capital at Jackson—NASA will build the Mississippi test facility.

It should be ready by the fall of 1964. Target date for test firing is 1965.

Here, where Gainesvile thrived as an early 19th century rivertown and sawmill center, then slid downhill when the railroad bypassed it in 1833, the space agency will put up a complex of giant rocket test towers—some taller than the Statue of Liberty.

The towers will fire "hot" tied-down tests of the advanced Saturn and Nova boosters—the world's largest rocket engines—that one day will launch astronauts on a 2½ day, 238,000 mile journey to the moon.

After testing, the barges will haul the giant engines across the Gulf of Mexico for firing at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The outer circle, which rings the test center for some six miles, is a buffer zone. The space agency is buying perpetual easement rights to most of this land—that is, authority to use the land without actually owning it.

Lively Art Makes Gradual Entrance

By JOHN CALE
Staff Writer

The pleasant note of the musical comedy, "Carnival," which opened the Northeast State concert series here just before the Christmas season, furnished enough sustaining power to keep things moving for awhile.

But January and early February will see local houselights dim and the footlights go up for several presentations.

A Sunday engagement of the Vienna Choir Boys has been set for the afternoon of January 27. This seems appropriate in view of the fact that the well-known group specializes in religious music.

Over Ruston way, the La Tech Concerts Association has booked the Roger Wagner Chorale for two performances on Thursday, February 7.

Tryouts for the Little Theatre of Monroe's annual musical, this year it's "Annie Get Your Gun," got underway during the past week at Strauss Playhouse. No date has been set for opening night, but we presume late February would be a safe guess.

VOCALIST

This year's national "Singer of the Year" award went to a former Louisianian who is now a member of the music faculty at Bethany College in Oklahoma City. Robert W. Hale, a native of Marksville and nephew of Mrs. Edward Saucier, 4113 Webster Drive, Monroe, received the honor from the National Association of Teachers of Singing at the organization's annual meeting in Los Angeles, California. Hale won the regional auditions, then followed by entered the national competition in Los Angeles on December 27.

NEW MUSIC

The appeal to artists, musicians and actors to communicate their talents to the audience has long been expressed in this and other columns on the live arts. Now some supporting opinions have come in from at least two widely separated sources.

The first of these is a paper published in a new journal from the Princeton University Press called "Perspectives of New Music." The essay is entitled "The Proper Study of Music" by Charles Rosen.

Rosen is obviously worried a to which contemporary serious music does not seem to serve as a drawing card for concert attendance. He says,

"We can blame the public, if we like, and they have their share of the heavy irresponsibility. But, after all, why should they buy tickets to hear works of contemporary music when the performances are as bad as they generally are? They do not, of course, buy tickets to the good performances, either, but how are they to know which ones are good when even the critics are mostly not able to tell them?"

After revealing the astonishing isolation among today's composers, performers, teachers and listeners — including audiences and critics — Rosen charges composers, schools and students to inject the necessary understanding and vitality into music's contemporary forms.

LIKEWISE ART

In a less scholarly vein, but equally frank, Show magazine, issued a note from John Richardson to lovers of contemporary art.

"Here is a friendly warning to lovers of modern art: run for your lives, friends—the floodgates are opened! The stagnant pool of old-fashioned academic art forms, so long dammed, is threatening to gush forth and inundate the newer trends in painting.

"There is really nothing sudden about this renascence of interest in the florid, finicky type of painting known as the Salon, or Academic, school. It has been becoming increasingly evident that many leaders in the art world, bored with the kookier manifestations of abstract expressionism, were turning to the older art forms, subjects and techniques."

It appears even the artists are weary of shocking the public!

End Of Strike Not In Sight

NEW YORK (AP)—New York's newspaper strike entered its fifth week Saturday with no end in sight.

William E. Simkin, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, said no date was set for a resumption of negotiations which broke off in a deadlock Thursday.

Simkin said, however, he would be in frequent touch with the Publishers Association of New York City and the striking Local No. 6, International Typographical Union, AFL-CIO.

A House of Representatives subcommittee revealed meanwhile that it would look into the strike, probably next month.

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., chairman of an antitrust subcommittee that has been probing for a year to inquire into declining competition among news media, did not go into detail as to what the subcommittee would try to learn about the strike.

electrical appliances. It said the plotters counted on getting other arms in raids on Peruvian military installations.

A clandestine radio station was reported set up near the Bolivian border to receive instructions from abroad.

The communique said subver[illegible]e strongholds were set up in [illegible]ma, and seven other points.

The junta said the plot was a[illegible]med to sow seeds of unrest in [illegible] walks of life and, among other things, reverse Peru's pro-Western policy.

The crackdown followed strike violence and other disorders, largely among peasants and miners. This unrest had caused the most severe criticism of the government since the armed forces deposed President Manual Prado and replaced him with Perez Godoy, a general, in a bloodless coup last July 18.

The communique said the plotters aimed to create political and social chaos so as to prevent general elections the junta has scheduled for next June to restore civilian rule.

It reported the Red timetable called for a victory celebration in May, with a parade displaying huge pictures of foreign Communist leaders.

The junta's decision to hold elections in June was a factor in the United States' decision last Aug. 17 to resume relations with Peru and to continue sending it economic aid at the rate of about $81 million a year. Another factor was the junta's restoration of civil liberties after a brief period of martial law.

The U.S. government had suspended ties with Peru after the coup, which the White House denounced as a setback to the Alliance for Progress program.

The main reason for the coup appeared to be that the presidency had been won by Victor Raul Haya de la Torre, candidate of the leftist, but anti-Communist, APRA party.

Evans as:

1. Develop and submit to the city council and administrative plan for carrying out each of the projects.

2. Work with the planning commission, architects and engineers.

3. Establish a time table for the construction of the projects and a corresponding schedule for sale of bonds.

4. Establish administrative office.

5. Coordinate all projects, working with the architects and engineers.

6. Establish a plan whereby all lands and rights-of-ways may be obtained.

7. In general, attend to the many details which are necessary to these public improvements and the coordination of each of them.

After announcement of the appointment, the city council issued a statement saying:

"We are very pleased and gratified that Mr. Evans accepted the appointment. This is the largest undertaking in the history of Monroe. With all the normal duties of the mayor and the city commissioners, we felt it was imperative to have someone with ability and background to coordinate and carry out these programs. We urgently call upon the public to assist the council and Mr. Evans so we might get the very best possible investment and secure facilities of which our citizens will be proud.

"The city council pledges its full support in carrying out these projects and assures Mr. Evans that every department in the city government will assist him in every way."

Scogin, in speaking for the Chamber of Commerce, said "This program is part of the five-year plan of work instituted by the chamber in 1960. Certainly, the Chamber of Commerce is proud to see this part of the program become reality. We feel we are most fortunate in having a man of Mr. Evans' qualifications to coordinate the program."

Vanderpool said:

"The capital improvement expenditure is the largest Monroe has ever undertaken. It will require a tremendous amount of energy and knowledge to achieve the best results. I feel we are extremely fortunate in having a man of Mr Evans' calibre to administer the expenditure of the public improvement funds. I would like to commend the city officials for their foresightedness in appointing Mr. Evans to handle the program."

Guthrie said:

"The members of the City are to be complimented on their choice of Robert H. Evans as coordinator for construction of Monroe's new sewerage disposal plant, civic center auditorium, city hall and jail, airport terminal and expansion of our fire department facilities. I am sure the citizens of Monroe will be pleased that Mr. Evans has accepted the heavy responsibilities attached to this undertaking. Mr. Evans has a highly successful record as manager of the Olin plant in West Monroe and he has worked diligently as a volunteer citizen to improve the economic, health, welfare and cultural conditions in our parish. His selection by the City Council is another indication of their determination to get maximum value for our tax dollars in the construction of these much needed improvements."

Members of the citizen advisory committee who worked with the City Council in selecting and obtaining Evans were:

electrical appliances. It said the plotters counted on getting other arms in raids on Peruvian military installations.

A clandestine radio station was reported set up near the Bolivian border to receive instructions from abroad.

The communique said subversive strongholds were set up in Lima, and seven other points.

The junta said the plot was aimed to sow seeds of unrest in all walks of life and, among other things, reverse Peru's pro-Western policy.

The crackdown followed strike violence and other disorders, largely among peasants and miners. This unrest had caused the most severe criticism of the government since the armed forces deposed President Manual Prado and replaced him with Perez Godoy, a general, in a bloodless coup last July 18.

The communique said the plotters aimed to create political and social chaos so as to prevent general elections the junta has scheduled for next June to restore civilian rule.

It reported the Red timetable called for a victory celebration in May, with a parade displaying huge pictures of foreign Communist leaders.

The junta's decision to hold elections in June was a factor in the United States' decision last Aug. 17 to resume relations with Peru and to continue sending it economic aid at the rate of about $81 million a year. Another factor was the junta's restoration of civil liberties after a brief period of martial law.

The U.S. government had suspended ties with Peru after the coup, which the White House denounced as a setback to the Alliance for Progress program.

The main reason for the coup appeared to be that the presidency had been won by Victor Raul Haya de la Torre, candidate of the leftist, but anti-Communist, APRA party.

Davis said "Morality in government probably will be another issue. There will always be an issue whether the governor is named Jones, Davis, Long or John M. Parker. New Orleans Factions Join For Venture

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A new political alignment among New Orleans Democrats, scheduled to be formalized this week, will mean trouble for Mayor Victor Schiro and Gov. Jimmie H. Davis — and a big boost for former Mayor deLesseps Morrison.

The merger of the old Regular Democratic Organization (RDO) and elected officials closely associated with Morrison became assured Friday night when it was approved by the RDO caucus.

The new organization, to be called the Crescent Regular Democratic Organization (CRDO), seems virtually certain to become a major force in New Orleans politics, in opposition to Schiro's Crescent City Democratic Association (CCDA).

Leaders of the RDO and the elected officials, headed by former CCDA chairman Clyde Bel, plan to meet Tuesday to organize the CRDO.

The new group brings together Morrison, his long-time enemies in the RDO and a group of elected officials who followed the former mayor's lead and backed the unsuccessful campaign of state Sen. Adrian Duplantier against Mayor Schiro last winter.

The leaders of the merger move were Morrison, former RDO leader and longtime Assessor James E. Comiskey and Councilman James E. Fitzmorris, a former Morrison running mate who jumped to the RDO several years ago.

Strongly opposed were backers of both Mayor Schiro and Gov. Davis, who could find himself with major organized opposition for the first time in several years.

After the caucus, which approved the merger by a 12½-10½ vote after bitter debate, Assessor Comiskey denied that the new organization was formed to support Morrison's campaign for governor this fall.

The former mayor, now U.S. ambassador to the Organization of American States, is expected to resign that post this summer to make his third bid for the governorship. The formation of CRDO provides him with the basis for the campaign organization he lost when he resigned as mayor two years ago.

Sources said what in addition to backing Morrison for governor, the new organization will work for the election as mayor in 1966 of either Fitzmorris or James A. Comiskey, the assessor's son who was the RDO's unsuccessful candidate last year.

Its last mayor, Robert Maestri was defeated in 1946 by Morrison, who then whipped three more RDO candidates in future races. Its only political largesse since has come from the state administrations of Earl K. Long and, since 1960, Jimmie H. Davis.

Young Comiskey was seen for a time as possible saviour of the RDO but he ran a fading third in the first Democratic primary for mayor, well behind Duplantier and Schiro. The RDO then swung its support to Schiro, but the mayor chose to take over the CCDA, rather than work through the RDO.

Although it brings together hitherto opposed interest groups, CRDO actually had its genesis nearly two years ago after Morrison's resignation as mayor.

Several meetings were held in an effort to elect young Comiskey, then a councilman-at-large, as mayor instead of Schiro, but the plan fell through. This episode, marked by the famous "boathouse" meeting between the two factions, provided a basis for the future Morrison - Comiskey rapprochement.

If the new group does end up as Morrison's campaign organization, it could lead to some early strains in the alliance. Among the RDO members joining the new group are a running of old-time Long leaders, headed by Ernest J. Hessler, parish registrar of conveyances.

If either Sen. Russell B. Long or his cousin, Rep.-elect Gillis Long, decides to run for governor, Hessler and his allies would doubtless come to their support.

Naval District Commander Sets Inspection Here

Rear Adm. Charles H. Lyman, a former assistant chief of staff to the task force that conducted atomic bomb tests, will visit Monroe Monday.

Lyman, new commandant of the Eighth Naval District with headquarters in New Orleans, will inspect the U.S. Naval Reserve electronics facility here.

His plans also include informal discussions with the officers on various Naval Reserve [illegible].

The Monroe visit is the first stop on a tour which includes a trip to Alexandria Tuesday and Baton Rouge Wednesday for similar inspections and discussions in those cities.

Upon graduation in 1926 he joined the USS West Virginia. In subsequent years he held numerous commands in Naval service and attended post-graduate school at Annapolis and at the Navy Yard in Washington, D.C.

For outstanding service during World War II, he received two Letters of Commendation from the Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet and was authorized to wear the Commendation Ribbon and Bronze Star.

After the war, Lyman reported for duty in the office of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations in Washington, and it was then that he was assigned as assistant Chief of Staff, working with the bomb test.

He was cited for meritorious conduct in planning and directing the task force work with the tests.

Later, Lyman graduated from the National War College in Washington and served in the Bureau of Ordnance. After temporary duty at various places, he headed the Department of Strategy and Tactics at the U.S. Naval War College in Newport, R.I. He also earned several more medals and ribbons.

Following other duty, he was named commandant of the Eighth Naval District last August.

Politics In Louisiana Taking Shape For Big Year To Come During '63

Davis May Take A Hand In Campaign

By JAMES MCLEAN

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Gov. Jimmie H. Davis said Saturday any man who has served twice as Louisiana governor has "an understandable interest in who will succeed him."

This may be the first hint the "You Are My Sunshine" balladier is thinking of paying more than a fence-sitting role in the campaign which starts next summer.

In an interview, the governor was asked whether he thought he and U.S. Sen. Russell B. Long would favor the same candidate.

Sen. Long, No. 2 man on the powerful Senate Finance Committee, has insisted twice he has no plans to run for governor himself this time.

Long, however, has indicated he will outline in the spring what part he expects to play. But he has declined to say anything else now.

"I don't know who Sen. Long would like to see serve as governor," Davis replied.

"As for me," the governor continued, "I have no particular candidate at the present time, for I don't know who will run. But I have a natural interest in who will succeed me, just as every man who has occupied the governor's chair has had.

"A man cannot be born in the state, receive an education in a state and twice serve as governor of that state," Davis said, "without having an understandable interest in who will succeed him."

In Louisiana, a governor cannot be his own immediate successor for a new four-year term. But rarely has a governor completely ignored the campaigns of those wanting him to succeed him.

Twice, however, under former Gov. Robert Kennon and under former Gov. Earl K. Long, the voters have rejected any direct, hand-picked choice of the man in office.

But there is no law that says a governor can't try, and a governor holds tremendous influence during the height of the campaigns leading to the Dec. 7 first primary.

Davis was noted during his first term 1944-48 as a governor who did not attempt to create a political machine.

The ballad-singing governor this time has held a strong grip on his legislature, fired back at his critics after a long period of cheek turning, rode a horse up the state capitol steps and built a million-dollar mansion.

"No one knows better than I do how important the chief executive is to a state," Davis commented. "I would not be human if I didn't have an interest in who that man will be. There are a lot of people who would make good governors, but there are few who could be elected.

"There is one thing we must never overlook," Davis summed up. "You have to be elected, before you can serve."

Finances, certainly, will be a campaign issue, Davis said. "Over the years the cost of government has continually risen, if for no other reason than the fact that the population has risen.

"The more people you have, the more benefits they want, the more it costs to provide them. I believe in this respect the man who takes office after me will be more fortunate than I was when I came in . . . we are operating on a balanced budget, without depending on windfalls or other unexpected sources of revenue.

"I think many promises will be made regarding increased benefits," the governor added, "but I don't think the people will demand these to the extent that they have in the past. By now, most of our citizens understand that every benefit carries with it a price tag, and they are as concerned with the fiscal stability as with increased benefits."

Davis said, "Morally in government probably will be another issue—this will always be an issue, whether the governor is named Jones, Davis, Long or John M. Parker. I believe people generally understand that no administration has a monopoly on virtue . . . I think everybody in government service is like I am, in that he hopes to make as few mistakes as possible."

Regardless of who is elected, the governor said, "I am sure that he won't get the idea that he can get the state's affairs to run just exactly as he would wish.

"It takes a lot of people to run government," Davis said, "and it never runs just like a governor would like it to go."

Naval District Commander Sets Inspection Here

Rear Adm. Charles H. Lyman, a former assistant Chief of Staff to the task force that conducted atomic bomb tests, will visit Monroe Monday.

Lyman, now commandant of the Eighth Naval District with headquarters in New Orleans, will inspect the U.S. Naval Reserve electronics facility here.

His plans also include informal discussions with the officers on various Naval Reserve topics.

The Monroe visit is the first stop on a tour which includes a trip to Alexandria Tuesday and Baton Rouge Wednesday, for similar inspections and discussions in those cities.

A native of Philadelphia, Pa., Lyman is a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md.

Upon graduation in 1926, he joined the USS West Virginia. In subsequent years he held numerous commands in Naval service, and attended post-graduate school at Annapolis and at the Navy Yard in Washington, D.C.

For outstanding service during World War II, he received two Letters of Commendation from the Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet, and was authorized to wear the Commendation Ribbon and Bronze Star.

After the war, Lyman reported to duty in the office of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations in Washington, and it was then that he was assigned as assistant Chief of Staff, working with the bomb tests.

He was cited for meritorious conduct in planning and directing the task force work with the tests.

Later, Lyman graduated from the National War College in Washington and served in the Bureau of Ordnance. After temporary duty at various places, he headed the Department of Strategy and Tactics at the U.S. Naval War College in Newport, R.I. He also earned several more medals and ribbons.

Following other duty, he was named commandant of the Eighth Naval District last August.

New Orleans Factions Join For Venture

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—A new political alignment among New Orleans Democrats, scheduled to be formalized this week, will mean trouble for Mayor Victor Schiro and Gov. Jimmie H. Davis —and a big boost for former Mayor deLesseps Morrison.

The merger of the old Regular Democratic Organization (RDO) and elected officials closely associated with Morrison became assured Friday night when it was approved by the RDO caucus.

The new organization, to be called the Crescent Regular Democratic Organization (CRDO), seems virtually certain to become a major force in New Orleans politics, in opposition to Schiro's Crescent City Democratic Association (CCDA).

Leaders of the RDO and the elected officials, headed by former CCDA chairman Clyde Bel, plan to meet Tuesday to organize the CRDO.

The new group brings together Morrison, his long-time enemies in the RDO and a group of elected officials who followed the former mayor's lead and backed the unsuccessful campaign of state Sen. Adrian Duplantier against Mayor Schiro last winter.

The leaders of the merger move were Morrison, former RDO leader and longtime Assessor James E. Comiskey and Councilman James E. Fitzmorris, a former Morrison running mate who jumped to the RDO several years ago.

Strongly opposed were backers of both Mayor Schiro and Gov. Davis, who could find himself with major organized opposition for the first time in several years.

After the caucus, which approved the merger by a 12½-10½ vote after bitter debate, Assessor Comiskey denied that the new organization was formed to support Morrison's campaign for governor this fall.

The former mayor, now U.S. ambassador to the Organization of American States, is expected to resign that post this summer to make his third bid for the governorship. The formation of CRDO provides him with the basis for the campaign organization he lost when he resigned as mayor two years ago.

Sources said what in addition to backing Morrison for governor, the new organization will work for the election as mayor in 1966 of either Fitzmorris or James A. Comiskey, the assessor's son who was the RDO's unsuccessful candidate last year.

Its last mayor, Robert Maestri was defeated in 1946 by Morrison, who then whipped three more RDO candidates in future races. Its only political largesse since has come from the state administrations of Earl K. Long and, since 1960, Jimmie H. Davis.

Young Comiskey was seen for a time as possible saviour of the RDO but he ran a fading third in the first Democratic primary for mayor, well behind Duplantier and Schiro. The RDO then swung its support to Schiro, but the mayor chose to take over the CCDA, rather than work through the RDO.

Although it brings together hitherto opposed interest groups, CRDO actually had its genesis nearly two years ago after Morrison's resignation as mayor.

Several meetings were held in an effort to elect young Comiskey, then a councilman-at-large, as mayor instead of Schiro, but the plan fell through. This episode, marked by the famous "boathouse" meeting between the two factions, provided a basis for the future Morrison - Comiskey rapprochement.

If the new group does end up as Morrison's campaign organization, it could lead to some early strains in the alliance. Among the RDO members joining the new group are a running of old-time Long leaders, headed by Ernest J. Hessler, parish registrar of conveyances.

If either Sen. Russell B. Long or his cousin, Rep.-elect Gillos Long, decides to run for governor, Hessler and his allies would doubtless come to their support.

Space Life Search Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of 100 top-ranking American scientists urged the government Saturday to place more emphasis on searching for life beyond the earth.

They cited international prestige as one consideration, and voiced concern that life-detection experiments might not be ready in time for inclusion in the first unmanned capsule landing on Mars, scheduled for 1966.

The scientists expressed some criticism of the man-in-space program. They said not enough emphasis is being put on developing techniques to sustain astronauts on prolonged flights such as those to the moon and the planets.

Among other things, the group called for inclusion of a microphone in the first unmanned capsule to Mars in order to record the swish of any plants waving in the Martian winds and the sounds of any creatures that might be on the prowl.

The recommendations were contained in a 16-chapter report to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration by the Space Science Board of the National Academy of Sciences.

The huge document summarizes discussions and recommendations of a group of government, university and industry scientists who met at the State University of Iowa last summer to appraise the nation's space research. The study was organized by the Space Science Board at the request of the National Space Agency.

While enthusiastically endorsing NASA's space science program on the whole, the group urged that the hunt for extra-terrestrial life be elevated to "the top priority scientific goal of our space program."

It said that up to now Nasa's effort in space biology — which would include the search for life on other planets — has been sporadic. NASA, it said, has been giving principal support to biology projects designed to get man into space, as distinguished from experiments aimed at finding whether life exists elsewhere in space.

Saying that Mars looks like the most likely of all the planets for sustaining life, the scientists said "it is not clear that the development of already programmed experiments is proceeding as rapidly as would be appropriate . . . Therefore, it remains an open question whether this program is moving at a pace which will insure the inclusion of life-detection experiments in the first vehicles we shall send toward Mars."

"Of all the discoveries that have come from or can now be anticipated from man's efforts on space science," the report said, "none more easily captures the imagination nor is more likely to focus interest and acclaim than the empiraeal proof that there is in this universe a biota (life system) other than our own."

3rd Class Mail Regulations Are Liberalized

The upgrading of mail rates due to take effect Monday is not the only change in postal service brought by the new year, according to West Monroe Postmaster Homer B. Roark.

One benefit listed Friday by Roark as accruing now to the nation's postal patrons took effect Jan. 1 and is a liberalization of regulations affecting use of third class mail.

"Third class mail now can legally be mailed sealed," he explained. "The only requirement made by the post office is that it be rubber-stamped or promiently marked in ink as being third class."

Prior to the new year, third class letters could not be sealed. If they were, recipients were required to pay postage due on first class mail on delivery. The post office, however, still retains the option of opening third class mail for postal inspection, a privilege not permitted on first class.

As always, the only way first class mail can be opened is when it reaches the dead letter office, after efforts to effect delivery or return to sender have been exhausted. They are opened in the attempt to return valuables to the owner.

Third class mail rates go up Monday, Roark reminded local patrons, from three cents to four cents. Also changing area rates on first class mail, going up from four cents to five, and on air mail, moving from seven cents to eight.

VIET NAM WAR

Officers Consider Change In Tactics

SAIGO, Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. and Vietnamese officers considered Saturday possible changes in tactics to eliminate mistakes that showed up in the bloodiest single battle of South Viet Nam's four-year war against the Communist Viet Cong.

This was the battle of Ap Bac, near Tan Hiep, Wednesday.

Communist fire killed 66 government troops and three Americans, wounded about 110 government troops and 10 Americans, and downed five U.S. helicopters. The government said more than 100 guerrillas were killed. About 40 enemy bodies were found.

There was criticism among American officers of the conduct of the attack. The concensus listed inadequate intelligence, poor coordination and a lack of aggressiveness on the government side.

"If only they'd fought a little more aggressively in the beginning," one U.S. officer said, "they wouldn't have taken so many casualties later on."

In the opinion of another American:

"They should have chased the Viet Cong after the big fight. They certainly would have caught a bunch of them flatfooted. It almost seemed as if the government forces were mainly interested in securing the area they held and getting out as fast as possible."

It was clear, however, that the basic pattern of airborne assaults, adopted when the United States began a massive military assistance program in South Viet Nam 13 months ago, will be maintained. The U.S. Defense Department in Washington announced its determination to continue the use of helicopters.

"We've taken some casualties and we've lost some aircraft, but that's war," a helicopter company pilot said. "To do any good in a fight, you have to risk some casualties. A helicopter gets down close to the enemy and makes a good target, but the helicopter also is close enough so it can fire more effectively than a plane at the enemy."

Helicopter formations and landing patterns may undergo changes. There is a possibility strafing and bombing runs may be made as routine to silence enemy gunners at the outset of the attacks. But this would eliminate the element of surprise and give Red bands a chance to fade into the jungle before parachutists, rangers and infantrymen could land for action.

Some Vietnamese commanders considered their troops should not be dropped right at Communist strongholds as has been the practice, but some distance away. On the other hand, most American advisers feel the combat teams must come down on top of the Communists and go into action before the enemy can fade away.

The guerrillas have built up their arsenal with captured American weapons, ranging from carbines to grenade launchers, mortars and machine guns.

Most of the damage to government forces at Ap Bac was done by machine guns. One or two of these were emplaced in trees overlooking the landing field near the hamlet.

Space Life Search Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of 100 top-ranking American scientists urged the government Saturday to place more emphasis on searching for life beyond the earth.

They cited international prestige as one consideration, and voiced concern that life-detection experiments might not be ready in time for inclusion in the first unmanned capsule landing on Mars, scheduled for 1966.

The scientists expressed some criticism of the man-in-space program. They said not enough emphasis is being put on developing techniques to sustain astronauts on prolonged flights such as those to the moon and the planets.

Among other things, the group called for inclusion of a microphone in the first unmanned capsule to Mars in order to record the swish of any plants waving in the Martian winds and the sounds of any creatures that might be on the prowl.

The recommendations were contained in a 16-chapter report to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration by the Space Science Board of the National Academy of Sciences.

The huge document summarizes discussions and recommendations of a group of government, university and industry scientists who met at the State University of Iowa last summer to appraise the nation's space research. The study was organized by the Space Science Board at the request of the National Space Agency.

While enthusiastically endorsing NASA's space science program on the whole, the group urged that the hunt for extra-terrestrial life be elevated to "the top priority scientific goal of our space program."

It said that up to now Nasa's effort in space biology — which would include the search for life on other planets — has been sporadic. NASA, it said, has been giving principal support to biology projects designed to get man into space, as distinguished from experiments aimed at finding whether life exists elsewhere in space.

Saying that Mars looks like the most likely of all the planets for sustaining life, the scientists said "it is not clear that the development of already programmed experiments is proceeding as rapidly as would be appropriate . . . Therefore, it remains an open question whether this program is moving at a pace which will insure the inclusion of life-detection experiments in the first vehicles we shall send toward Mars."

"Of all the discoveries that have come from or can now be anticipated from man's efforts on space science," the report said, "none more easily captures the imagination nor is more likely to focus interest and acclaim than the empiracal proof that there is in this universe a biota (life system) other than our own."

3rd Class Mail Regulations Are Liberalized

The upgrading of mail rates due to take effect Monday is not the only change in postal service brought by the new year, according to West Monroe Postmaster Homer B. Roark.

One benefit listed Friday by Roark as accruing now to the nation's postal patrons took effect Jan. 1 and is a liberalization of regulations affecting use of third class mail.

"Third class mail now can legally be mailed sealed," he explained. "The only requirement made by the post office is that it be rubber-stamped or promiently marked in ink as being third class."

Prior to the new year, third class letters could not be sealed. If they were, recipients were required to pay postage due on first class mail on delivery. The post office, however, still retains the option of opening third class mail for postal inspection, a privilege not permitted on first class.

As always, the only way first class mail can be opened is when it reaches the dead letter office, after efforts to effect delivery or return to sender have been exhausted. They are opened in the attempt to return valuables to the owner.

Third class mail rates go up Monday, Roark reminded local patrons, from three cents to four cents. Also changing area rates on first class mail, going up from four cents to five, and on air mail, moving from seven cents to eight.

VIET NAM WAR

Officers Consider Change In Tactics

SAIGO, Viet Nam (AP)—U.S. and vietnamese officers considered Saturday possible changes in tactics to eliminate mistakes that showed up in the bloodiest single battle of South Viet Nam's four-year war against the Communist Viet Cong.

This was the battle of Ap Bac, near Tan Hiep, Wednesday.

Communist fire killed 66 government troops and three Americans, wounded about 110 government troops and 10 Americans, and downed five U.S. helicopters. The government said more than 100 guerrillas were killed. About 40 enemy bodies were found.

There was criticism among American officers of the conduct of the attack. The concensus listed inadequate intelligence, poor coordination and a lack of aggressiveness on the government side.

"If only they'd fought a little more aggressively in the beginning," one U.S. officer said, "they wouldn't have taken so many casualties later on."

In the opinion of another American:

"They should have chased the Viet Cong after the big fight. They certainly would have caught a bunch of them flatfooted. It almost seemed as if the government forces were mainly interested in securing the area they held and getting out as fast as possible."

It was clear, however, that the basic pattern of airborne assaults, adopted when the United States began a massive military assistance program in South Viet Nam 13 months ago, will be maintained. The U.S. Defense Department in Washington announced its determination to continue the use of helicopters.

"We've taken some casualties and we've lost some aircraft, but that's war," a helicopter company pilot said. "To do any good in a fight, you have to risk some casualties. A helicopter gets down close to the enemy and makes a good target, but the helicopter also is close enough so it can fire more effectively than a plane at the enemy."

Helicopter formations and landing patterns may undergo changes. There is a possibility strafing and bombing runs may be made as routine to silence enemy gunners at the outset of the attacks. But this would eliminate the element of surprise and give Red bands a chance to fade into the jungle before parachutists, rangers and infantrymen could land for action.

Some Vietnamese commanders considered their troops should not be dropped right at Communist strongholds as has been the practice, but some distance away. On the other hand, most American advisers feel the combat teams must come down on top of the Communists and go into action before the enemy can fade away.

The guerrillas have built up their arsenal with captured American weapons, ranging from carbines to grenade launchers, mortars and machine guns.

Most of the damage to government forces at Ap Bac was done by machine guns. One or two of these were emplaced in trees overlooking the landing field near the hamlet.

Living Monument

Large forests and a thriving lumber industry in the Urania area stand as a monument to a pioneer who was able to look far into the future and prescribe methods for preserving and perpetuating vast timber resources. Here is the story behind the man, and the others who followed in his footsteps.

Urania, which is located some 60 miles south of Monroe on Highway 165 and the Missouri Pacific Railroad, is an important lumber center.

This singularly beautiful and unique little town of 1,500 reflects the quietude and permanency created by the great pine forests that are its life blood and the assurance of its planned perpetuity.

The emergence of the Urania Lumber Company from a small operation employing a dozen or so men and manufacturing a few hundred feet of rough lumber a day to a giant enterprise manufacturing almost every type of building material made of wood except pulp products, is a living monument to its founder, the late Henry E. Hardtner. His penetrating perception of what the future held for the lumber industry resulted in his formulating the basic forestry practices that prevail today in Urania Lumber Company's perpetual backlog of managed forests on 120,000 acres, dispersed in the parishes of LaSalle, Winn, Caldwell, Grant, Catahoula, Rapides, Bienville, and Franklin.

BEAUTY ELEMENT

Parenthetically, Hardtner's deep appreciation of the aesthetic is revealed in the name of the enterprise and town he founded. He named the place Urania for the muse of astronomy, suggestive of "heavenly," because of the beauty of its surroundings and the atmosphere of quiet and repose that pervaded the whole scene.

Hardtner began his Urania operation in 1898 on a small scale. He saw the tall majestic pines that were "ripe" for harvesting, but of greatest importance to the people of this generation, he percieved in the young trees an invaluable potential for the future. Given time and care little trees would make big trees, and the better the care, the faster would be their growth and maturity.

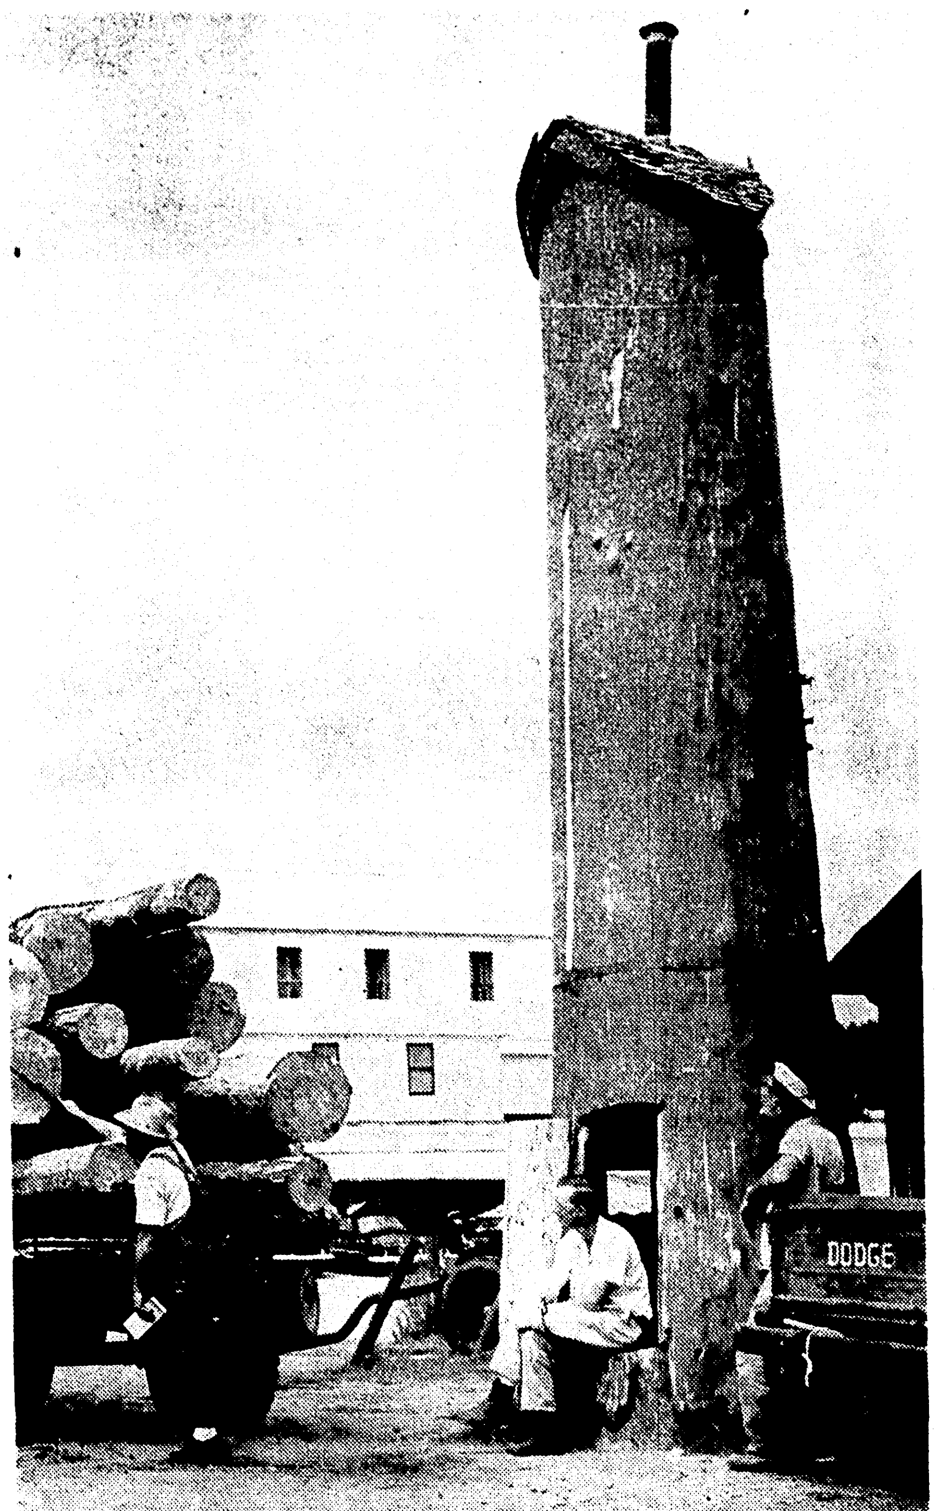
INTRODUCED

With this hypothesis in mind, Hardtner, at the beginning of the century, introduced two revolutionary practices, select cutting of trees and scientific tree farming. When contemporary sawmills were literally working the pine forests to the point of virtual extinction, the Urania Lumber Company was leaving seed trees and protecting the young growth from the ravages of forest fires.

Within a decade or two the growth of the young forests was phenominal, and Hardtner placed signs along the highways calling attention of passers by to his experiments. There were signs such as, "The Pines are Coming Back," "Grow a crop of Timber in 40 Years."

By the 1920's when contemporary sawmills began to "cut out" leaving "ghost towns" and thousands of men without jobs, Urania had a potential of prime timber that would never be exhausted.

As a result, conservationists and economists from all parts of the nation went to Urania where they used the experimental plots which were protected, and forests, as a laboratory for studying reforestation in actual practice.



A GIANT CYPRESS, with its trunk fashioned into a "house," is headquarters for night watchman. It grew in Castor Creek Swamp near Urania.

LABORATORY

Taking cognizance of Urania's phemominally successful reforestation methods, the directors of Yale University's School of Forestry chose this company's managed forests and experimental plots as a laboratory for learning correct reforestation procedures.

Their findings were compiled and made available to other schools of forestry and to land holding companies and individuals, on request.

Urania today is the biggest single operation as well as the biggest tax payer in LaSalle Parish; and more than that, Urania Lumber Company is one of the biggest processors of forest products in the world.

KEY ROLES

And most important to LaSalle Parish, and to the State of Louisiana, it plans to continue to expand with the passing of the years.

Four men have played important roles in the development of Urania. They are the late Henry E. Hardtner, its founder; the late Q. T. Hardtner, who assumed control after his brother's death in 1935; Q. T. Hardtner Jr., who has headed the company since his father's death in 1952; and G. M. Tannehall who acted as assistant to the president, commissary manager and advisor on policy matters until his death in 1940.

Today, Urania has many families who are descendants of those who went there when the company was founded more than three generations ago, and those who moved there during its later years of expansion soon acquired the homey, neighborly attributes that prevail in Urania at this time.

Although a town when measured by population, Urania has no municipal government. The Urania Lumber Company owns the entire town and prescribes its policies. Rowdyism and law violations are practically nonexistent, for these just don't belong in Urania. A deputy sheriff resides there as a precautionary measure.

CHURCHES

Urania has churches of all faiths common to this section of Louisiana, and they are well
tended. The Henry E. Hardtr
Memorial Hospital is adequ

spacious and well-equipped rec ia Elementary School, a new

Urania today, as in its yes
years, maintains an atmosph

Urania today is the biggest single operation as well as the biggest tax payer in LaSalle Parish; and more than that, Urania Lumber Company is one of the biggest processors of forest products in the world.

KEY ROLES

And most important to LaSalle Parish, and to the State of Louisiana, it plans to continue to expand with the passing of the years.

Four men have played important roles in the development of Urania. They are the late Henry E. Hardtner, its founder; the late Q. T. Hardtner, who assumed control after his brother's death in 1935; Q. T. Hardtner Jr., who has headed the company since his father's death in 1952; and G. M. Tannehall who acted as assistant to the president, commissary manager and advisor on policy matters until his death in 1940.

Today, Urania has many families who are descendants of those who went there when the company was founded more than three generations ago, and those who moved there during its later years of expansion soon acquired the homey, neighborly attributes that prevail in Urania at this time.

Although a town when measured by population, Urania has no municipal government. The Urania Lumber Company owns the entire town and prescribes its policies. Rowdyism and law violations are practically nonexistent, for these just don't belong in Urania. A deputy sheriff resides there as a precautionary measure.

CHURCHES

Urania has churches of all faiths common to this section of Louisiana, and they are well attended. The Henry E. Hardtner Memorial Hospital is adequate for the town and renders a high order of professional service. A spacious and well-equipped recreation hall provides recreation for persons of all ages, and the Urania Elementary School, a new and modern semi - fireproof brick structure, renders an educational service. High school students have free transportation to LaSalle High School in Olla, only four miles away.

Urania today, as in its yesteryears, maintains an atmosphere that its name implies in its congenial people, its permanency, and its spirit of quietude and repose.

Two K's In Agreement?

Ever since the Russian pullout of nuclear warheads in Cuba many people in the United States, and doubtless in the rest of the world, have been puzzled by the extraordinary amity existing between the world's two big K's — President Kennedy of the United States and Premier Khrushchev of Russia.

Also, there has been some wonder about the recent silence of the United States on when this country plans to attempt a landing on the moon.

Out of Paris, France, comes a story that may throw some light on both of those things.

The newspaper Paris Presse says the United States and the Soviet Union have signed a secret agreement to work together and to pool their resources in future space research.

The newspaper said the agreement is aimed at putting a mixed team of Americans and Russians [illegible] 1964. The world [illegible] United Nations flag [illegible] Paris Presse said.

A [illegible] Press International [illegible] of Paris said the [illegible] Lucien Barnier "was not [illegible] so good but contained logical argument."

The Paris Presse story said the accord "has not been signed" by top astronautic officials, Hugh Dryden for the United States and Anatoli Blagonravov for the Soviet Union.

The National Aeronautical and Space Association in Washington denied that the United States and Russia have signed any agreement to assist each other physically toward putting a man on the moon but stated some cooperation had been planned.

The Paris Presse dispatch said the agreement followed six months of secret negotiations, which would be continued through 1963.

The dispatch said both Americans and Russians have started internal propaganda campaigns for the project.

It quoted President Kennedy as saying recently: "Is it really necessary that we should pay so much for the somewhat slight advantage of preceding the Russians on the moon by a few months?"

A few days later, it said, the Soviet Tass news agency quoted Russian Scientist Larovi as saying: "In order to reach the planets the Americans and the Russians must make too heavy sacrifices if they are to work separately. The best thing would be to pool our efforts."

True cooperation among the world's leading nations in exploring space would seem advantageous but in the reported pact between the United States and Russia several dangers lurk.

One of these is that the United States, as it usually does, will foot most of the bill but will take the Russians along and voluntarily give them equal advantages and equal opportunities without much cost to the Soviet Union.

Another is the secrecy involved. If the project is commendable, why must the public be kept in the dark until all plans have been made, until they have been propagandized and until it is too late to stop it if the people wanted too? The late President Franklin D. Roosevelt had a fantastic dream of chopping the world up into three portions, one to be ruled by Russia, one by the United States and the third by European powers. All the United States got out of Roosevelt's secret pact with the late Joseph Stalin of Russia was a big international mess which allowed Russia to make vast expansions in its holdings.

Perhaps the greatest danger is that the United Nations will be declared the owner of the universe, or at least those planets in space which earthmen are able to reach, and that this communist-Russian-controlled organization will take possession not only of the earth but of all the reachable space and planets — after the United States has put up most of the money for making occupation of space possible.

Before it is too late, the whole question should be put before the people of the United States and should be threshed out thoroughly in congress.

Secrecy is the key to disaster — not success.

Volunteers In Hospitals

"It is a well known fact that volunteers in hospitals have saved taxpayers and hospitals millions of dollars. Many older people complain after retirement that they are bored with nothing to do. They can do hospital volunteer work and help patients to get well faster and make their lives happier."

That statement, which is completely true, was made by a woman former patient whose stay in a hospital had been made easier and brighter by volunteer workers. This situation exists in many states and cities, including Louisiana and Monroe. There is plenty of opportunity for people to help others, especially in hospitals.

The letter written by the enthusiastic former patient referred to old people who have retired and who want to do something that will relieve them of their boredom and help others, but the volunteer hospital service is by no means confined to older people. Women who have spare time on their hands and young students can be equally helpful.

Volunteers help in such departments as playrooms, laboratories, library and medical records. They fill clerical jobs in many departments, serve as receptionists, assort and deliver mail and do innumerable things for patients which nurses no longer have time to do.

Locally, the work of young volunteers has been beneficial to hospitals, patients and the workers themselves. High school boys who plan to become doctors and girls who expect to become nurses or doctors often find it advantageous to themselves, as well as helpful to others, to work in hospitals under the voluntary system.

This kind of work is beneficial to everyone concerned and it is done unselfishly.

U.S. 'Pigs' Ransom

"Conscience money" which United States taxpayers must pay as a part of the ransom for the Cuban prisoners captured in the Bay of Pigs invasion may run as high as $20 million.

The United States government, through loss of tax revenue, will share substantially in paying the cost of the ransom that brought the 1,113 Bay of Pigs prisoners back from Cuba.

Determining the exact cost to the government and therefore to the taxpayers may be impossible but one official, Mitchell Rogovin of the Internal Revenue Service, estimated the cost could reach $20 million.

Rogovin, counsel to the commissioner of internal revenue, was a member of Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy's four-man team that managed the government's role in the deal that sent some $50 million to $60 million dollars worth of drugs, food, other supplies and money to Cuba.

Some claim the Bay of Pigs invasion would have failed even if President Kennedy had not, at the last minute, when it was too late, withdrawn a promised umbrella of planes, because of the Russian buildup, but that was months before the buildup was disclosed.

Anyhow the part paid by the United States treasury can be counted as Kennedy "conscience money."

Postal Pay Increase

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

During the past several months, there have been several newspaper and magazine editorials criticizing the pay raises for federal employes and the increases in postage rates.

Although I feel all government employes, whether federal, state, or local, should receive salaries comparable to work of similar type and similar complexity in private industry, I will call attention to only one segment—postal employes.

I will use figures and statements which were presented at congressional hearings, and not juggled figures and statements which are misleading to the taxpayers.

We find in a study of the Monthly Labor Review, Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor for January 1962 that the average yearly wage for transportation and public utility workers was $5814.12. The average yearly wage of a postal worker was $4853.00, which left a difference of $961.12 between two groups of workers, which are probably the most closely allied of all workers in government and outside industry. The postal workers' average yearly increase was $500.00. This still leaves him $461.12 below his comparative level in private industry.

The transportation and public utility systems are akin to the postal service, inasmuch as the postal service is, to all intents and purposes, a utility system serving the public. It is a means of communication, and the transportation of said communications between one city and another. One newspaper editorial compared transportation workers with all federal employes, when the comparison should have been between transportation, public utility, and postal workers. This seems a little unfair.

Since the salary increases and postage rate increases were voted on as one bill in Congress, some information should be given to the taxpayers regarding the postal rate increases. The approximate yearly profit or loss in each class of mail is as following: 1st class-income equals cost; air-mail-$10,000,000 profit; 2nd class (newspaper and magazines)-$344,000,000 loss; 3rd class (mostly advertising circulars)-$250,000,000 loss; 4th class-parcel post-$114,000,000 loss.

Maybe I should not discuss this any further since my primary aim was to defend the postal clerk and his much-deserved pay raise.

Wrestling Coverage

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Why doesn't wrestling receive proper coverage in this area's newspapers, the Monroe News-Star and Morning World? This is a question that I have been asked many times, and one that I have asked at various times. I have yet to find an acceptable answer. So, would you please settle this subject for the many wrestling fans of this area, and for my benefit.

As you may or may not know, wrestling is increasing in popularity and attendance throughout this country. Many new areas are being opened up to wrestling. And in these areas, newspapers are keeping up with the time and giving coverage before and after the matches. So, I ask you, is this area going forward with progress or will it remain antique in wrestling coverage?

Please take a few minutes and answer these questions for my benefit.

What Causes Wrecks?

Jonesville, La.

To the Editor:

Wrecks happen when people drive real fast over slick or muddy roads.

They happen too when men or women are drunk and driving a car or truck.

I think if people want to drive they should not drive fast on slick or muddy roads and not when they are drunk. If they want to drink not to drink then drive. They should go home and then get all they want to drink.

Values Misjudged

Dodson, La.

To the Editor:

We too often accept material things in an errant way. Values have become so badly distorted till only a genius is competent to distinguish between the good and the bad. It is a sad state of affairs when human values are placed on the auction block at the mercy of a bunch of selfish demagogues. Apparently the majority of the people are unaware, or like the play.

Our Future In 1963

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

1 — Happiness: As a nation, may the New Year be filled with Happy Days instead of so much sorrow and trouble and to share it with others to make this a better place to live in. You will feel better for it.

2 — Peace: What is peace? Will there ever be peace on this Earth? We pay a terrible price in lives and in money trying to establish peace for the good of a'' mankind. Every house of worship, whether it be Protestants, Catholics, or Jews, offers prayers for peace. But as long as there are dictators or rulers who want to gain more power through their greed and hate and the killing of thousands upon thousands of innocent people, letting it go on indefinitely, how can we have peace? O, God, our Heavenly Father, let 1963 be a year of peace and demolish the pangs of war and the suffering and heartaches wars cause.

3—Love: When we can love everyone it is a wonderful way to live a good life. You say you can't love a person that stays drunk or one who throws his money away by gambling instead of giving the money to his wife or family. It is true in the sense of the word, but perhaps the same people that do those things didn't have any teaching of love at home and it could have driven them to doing those things. So we ought to go out of our way to teach or help them about the love of God and his fellowman: to lead a life filled with Bible stories of old. I can love my enemies — yes, according to the Bible, it says love your enemies. Go up and tell them you want to love them and make them realize what love can do in their lives. May the New Year — 1963 — bring to all of us more love in our hearts and let hate and contempt vanish away completely.

4—Prosperity: Prosperity is a wonderful thing to have, but with some people it goes to their head. The hope for the coming year may all be prosperous in business and have one of the best years to come.

5—Respect: A respective person is loved by all his friends in the business as well as the social way. To respect your elders is good raising. Again, in 1963, may more people cultivate the word respect and many lives would enjoy a richer life from God.

6—Devotion: May the New Year usher in more devotion to our God and go to his house often where you will get spiritual help that we all need, especially during these times.

7—Helpfulness: The year that will follow, may it help us to help anyone that is in trouble or sickness. You will be doing a good deed for your fellowman, and it will make you feel good doing it.

8—Good Health: Greatest gift from God. We should thank him every day for it and to appreciate it very much. We shouldn't take it for granted and think God should give us that whenever we want it. May 1963 be enriched with good health to all His children.

9—Good Friends: The New Year may you find lots of good friends, not the ones who will show you how to drink and to gamble. Those are not worth a dime a dozen, but the good Friends that will be helpful and an inspiration to you in your life.

10—Goodness: To be good is not hard. The word temptation gets in the way a great deal and by appearing in our weak minds it destroys the joy of being good. But we can overcome it by taking the will power and say as well as do — I will not be tempted by others in doing evil. So may 1963 find all of us free from temptation by the use of will power. That is all it takes.

11—Contentment: To live a contented life in 1963 can be had by studying and looking at all of God's beauty of the universe and to get interested in something that you like and in return you will be much better around your dear ones and friends.

12—Gratitude: Try in 1963 to be grateful to everyone, but especially to your parents and teachers while they are with you, and then being grateful to God who will look after you when your dear ones are gone and your teachers have finished with you.

No Camping Law

West Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

What I'm going to tell you might be of interest to hundreds of hunters of this area. It also could save them hundreds of dollars.

In Tensas Parish there is a No Camping law of the Wild Life Commission which says you must get a permit from the court house in St. Joseph, La., that costs $5.

Should a hunter camp anywhere he must get written permission from the landowner and a $5 permit from St. Joseph court house. Also, he must get permission to shoot does from the landowner, or it is not legal during the doe season.

Should he fail to do this and a state game agent checks him he will file charges. The bond is $38 per person cash or $50 property bond. There are no signs down there warning people of the No Camping Law. The Wild Life Commission does not put it on the hunting regulations either.

A party of four of us camped about six miles from New Light near 4-Way Grocery December 26. The game agent came by and filed charges against us for camping without a permit. We had a written permit from the landowner, Mr. Lee Miles of 4-Way Grocery, to hunt and camp on his property, but because we knew nothing of the Wild Life No Camping Law it cost us $152. I'm very surprised to know our Wild Life Commission would have laws like this and not have them published or posted in these hunting areas.

During these last days of deer season there will be many fined as we were. All the landowners we talked with were unaware of the law in their own parish.

Kennedy's Cigars

President Still Smoking Cubans Despite Importation Ban

Secretary Dean Rusk is the source of this intriguing bit of information.

It was disclosed at a social gathering in the State Department during the recent holidays. Much to the surprise of newsmen, Rusk came early and stayed late. Usually he drops in briefly and hurries off. This time he had several drinks and was most affable and chatty.

Taking advantage of this exceptional opportunity, one reporter on the chance of getting a Cuban clue, asked, "Mr. Secretary, without revealing any policy secrets can you tell us when we might get our Cuban cigars back?"

With a smile Rusk replied, "If you're really interested, I'll tell you how you can obtain them." When the correspondent nodded eagerly, Rusk continued, "Go to one of your diplomatic friends whose country has a mission in Havana and ask him to get you a supply of these cigars."

At this another reporter chimed in: "But Mr. Secretary, that wouldn't be patriotic."

"Come, come now," chuckled Rusk. "Surely you have been around Washington long enough to have lost your virginity!"

"How did you find out about this contraband?" asked the first newsman.

"Well," explained Rusk, "that's how the president gets his cigars."

The State Department chief threw no light on whether foreign embassies present Cuban cigars to the president, or just how they do reach him. But Rusk left no doubt that the president is enjoying banned Cuban cigars.

During this amiable chatting with the reporters, Rusk urged them to check their foreign policy stories with his department.

"You will find," he said earnestly, "that we aren't hard to get along with."

WHO DID IT? — Congressional sources are buzzing over one startling answer to Washington's current big mystery — Who was Attorney General Robert Kennedy's "great good friend" who put up $[illegible] million of the $2.9 million cash that Fidel Castro demanded as the ransom "prerequisite" on the liberation of the Bay of Pigs prisoners.

According to this congressional information, it was former Ambassador Joseph Kennedy, ailing father of the president and the attorney general.

There is no confirmation of any kind of this backstage word. Bobby has been on a skiing vacation in Colorado, and Justice Department officials close to him shrug their shoulders and claim they don't know.

But the report persists and is given considerable credence in congressional quarters.

One White House authority asked about the matter replied, "I would say that in due time full disclosure will be made of the entire ransom transaction who gave what and how much. This deal is still incomplete, and until it is closed, it would be inadvisable to publicly air details. But I am quite sure that in the end everything will be made public."

One thing is certain: Regardless of what the administration does, there will be vehement congressional insistence for a full accounting of the ransom affair.

INSIDE CUBA — A Russian four-engine IL-18 transport plane is now operating on Cuba's main airline. The Soviet transport, flown by a Russian pilot and Cuban co-pilot, is used on the route between Havana and Mexico City . . . Morocco has purchased 200,000 tons of raw sugar from Castro, in a barter deal between the two countries . . . Motor transport is in such bad repair in Cuba that the Ministry of Transportation has established a round-the-clock towing service. According to the official announcement, this new enterprise will tow vehicles from any place in the interior, no matter how remote . . . Several so-called brigades, totaling more than 1,000 workers, are being organized to harvest the sugar cane crop in Oriente Province. These brigades have been designated the "Red Battalion," and after they finish harvesting in Oriente, they will be moved to other provinces. This Communist-conceived scheme is an effort to avoid the difficulties that caused serious harvesting losses in the last sugar crop . . . U.S. authorities are checking on reports that five women from this country will attend a so-called Women's Congress in Havana later this month.

SOCIAL WHIRL — The new Congress is convening amid a deluge of social invitations. Washington's weather is at its wintry worst, the legislative outlook is stormy and highly uncertain, but there is no dearth of free-loading and partygoing for the lawmakers. Starting this Sunday with a reception for wives of new members, during the rest of the month there are several or more parties aimed at Congress every day. Among them are included Bobby's event on January 18 celebration of the second anniversary of the New Frontier, featured by a [illegible] . . . a State dinner followed by a show [illegible] variety show studded with Hollywood and Broadway stars . . . Representative James Auchincloss, R-N.J., gave the most unusual Christmas party in the capital. He entertained the 64 congressional telephone operators. Auchincloss thoughtfully provided a bus to transport them to the hotel where he gave the party, that featured "live" eggnog and a lavish buffet. Elizabeth Cole, chief operator and dean of the group, related that the operators man a 24-position switchboard 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and handle an average of 50,000 calls daily.

Tax 'Compromise'

Many Agree Easing Restrictive Rates Can Help Business

In 1962 we asked ourselves one vitally right question about the U. S. economy: Is the oppressive income tax structure we created at a time of global war a key reason business has failed to grow fast enough in recent years to take up the slack in production and employment? In 1962, the answer "yes!" emerged with remarkable unanimity among fiscal "conservatives" and "liberals," Republicans and Democrats, businessmen and labor leaders.

As a result of asking ourselves that right question and coming to that answer in 1962 the odds are the brightest in years that in 1963 Congress will overhaul our corporations.

Congress is about to convene. After the usual formalities, it will hear the President's messages, get to work. Overshadowing all other domestic legislation will be the call for tax reduction - reform.

It is already abundantly obvious that there will be major disagreements in Congress on the tax overhaul — its form, timing, size, impact on consumer and business spending patterns.

It is obvious too that getting tax reductions through this Congress will be no cinch in view of the facts that the new budget will be billions in the red for the third year in a row, the national debt is climbing to an all - time high and just the interest paid on this debt is now taking more than $10 billion of our tax money each year.

Let's, therefore, put a few basic points in perspective.

(1) Just about every informed, objective observer recognizes the danger to our nation of budget deficits on top of budget deficits. Years of red ink in a nation's budget can undermine its credit and the buying power of its currency just as years of red ink in a family's budget can undermine its credit and buying power. When Senator Byrd, the Virginia Democrat who heads the powerful Senate Finance Committee, warns of the perils in budget deficits, no one scoffs. The perils exist.

(2) Just about every informed, objective observer now agrees that our high income tax rates are a drag on our economy, that they blunt recoveries, encourage recessions, weaken incentives. The agreement on this is truly extraordinary.

(3) Just about every informed, objective observer realizes it is politically unrealistic to expect that federal spending will be cut as much as taxes are reduced—which is Byrd's demand. The President has said it plainly. Non - defense spending will be held near current levels but spending for defense, space and debt interest is going up. Regardless of how much you sympathize with Byrd's view, this is fact.

(4) Just about every informed, objective observer admits that if our economy continues moving as sluggisly as it has been for year, it will not produce enough taxes to cover government spending. We will pile new deficit on new deficit, our national debt will soar, our interest burden will rise even more, our unemployment rate will stay stickily high, our demands for goods will not be big enough to spur industry into hiking its spending for essential modernization - expansion programs.

During the past several months, there have been several newspaper and magazine editorials criticizing the pay raises for federal employes and the increases in postage rates.

Although I feel all government employes, whether federal, state, or local, should receive salaries comparable to work of similar type and similar complexity in private industry, I will call attention to only one segment—postal employes.

I will use figures and statements which were presented at congressional hearings, and not juggled figures and statements which are misleading to the taxpayers.

We find in a study of the Monthly Labor Review, Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor for January 1962 that the average yearly wage for transportation and public utility workers was $5814.12. The average yearly wage of a postal worker was $4853.00, which left a difference of $961.12 between two groups of workers, which are probably the most closely allied of all workers in government and outside industry. The postal workers' average yearly increase was $500.00. This still leaves him $461.12 below his comparative level in private industry.

The transportation and public utility systems are akin to the postal service, inasmuch as the postal service is, to all intents and purposes, a utility system serving the public. It is a means of communication, and the transportation of said communications between one city and another. One newspaper editorial compared transportation workers with all federal employes, when the comparison should have been between transportation, public utility, and postal workers. This seems a little unfair.

Since the salary increases and postage rate increases were voted on as one bill in Congress, some information should be given to the taxpayers regarding the postal rate increases. The approximate yearly profit or loss in each class of mail is as following: 1st class-income equals cost; air-mail-$10,000,000 profit; 2nd class (newspaper and magazines)-$344,000,000 loss; 3rd class (mostly advertising circulars)-$250,000,000 loss; 4th class-parcel post-$114,000,000 loss.

Maybe I should not discuss this any further since my primary aim was to defend the postal clerk and his much-deserved pay raise.

Wrestling Coverage

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Why doesn't wrestling receive proper coverage in this area's newspapers, the Monroe News-Star and Morning World? This is a question that I have been asked many times, and one that I have asked at various times. I have yet to find an acceptable answer. So, would you please settle this subject for the many wrestling fans of this area, and for my benefit.

As you may or may not know, wrestling is increasing in popularity and attendance throughout this country. Many new areas are being opened up to wrestling. And in these areas, newspapers are keeping up with the time and giving coverage before and after the matches. So, I ask you, is this area going forward with progress or will it remain antique in wrestling coverage?

Please take a few minutes and answer these questions for my benefit.

What Causes Wrecks?

Jonesville, La.

To the Editor:

Wrecks happen when people drive real fast over slick or muddy roads.

They happen too when men or women are drunk and driving a car or truck.

I think if people want to drive they should not drive fast on slick or muddy roads and not when they are drunk. If they want to drink not to drink then drive. They should go home and then get all they want to drink.

Values Misjudged

Dodson, La.

To the Editor:

We too often accept material things in an errant way. Values have become so badly distorted till only a genius is competent to distinguish between the good and the bad. It is a sad state of affairs when human values are placed on the auction block at the mercy of a bunch of selfish demagogues. Apparently the majority of the people are unaware, or like the play.

Our Future In 1963

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

1 — Happiness: As a nation, may the New Year be filled with Happy Days instead of so much sorrow and trouble and to share it with others to make this a better place to live in. You will feel better for it.

2 — Peace: What is peace? Will there ever be peace on this Earth? We pay a terrible price in lives and in money trying to establish peace for the good of all mankind. Every house of worship, whether it be Protestants, Catholics, or Jews, offers prayers for peace. But as long as there are dictators or rulers who want to gain more power through their greed and hate and the killing of thousands upon thousands of innocent people, letting it go on indefinitely, how can we have peace? O, God, our Heavenly Father, let 1963 be a year of peace and demolish the pangs of war and the suffering and heartaches wars cause.

3—Love: When we can love everyone it is a wonderful way to live a good life. You say you can't love a person that stays drunk or one who throws his money away by gambling instead of giving the money to his wife or family. It is true in the sense of the word, but perhaps the same people that do those things didn't have any teaching of love at home and it could have driven them to doing those things. So we ought to go out of our way to teach or help them about the love of God and his fellowman; to lead a life filled with Bible stories of old. I can love my enemies — yes, according to the Bible, it says love your enemies. Go up and tell them you want to love them and make them realize what love can do in their lives. May the New Year — 1963 — bring to all of us more love in our hearts and let hate and contempt vanish away completely.

4—Prosperity: Prosperity is a wonderful thing to have, but with some people it goes to their head. The hope for the coming year may all be prosperous in business and have one of the best years to come.

5—Respect: A respective person is loved by all his friends in the business as well as the social way. To respect your elders is good raising. Again, in 1963, may more people cultivate the word respect and many lives would enjoy a richer life from God.

6—Devotion: May the New Year usher in more devotion to our God and go to his house often where you will get spiritual help that all of us need, especially during these times.

7—Helpfulness: The year that will follow, may it help us to help anyone that is in trouble or sickness. You will be doing a good deed for your fellowman, and it will make you feel good doing it.

8—Good Health: Greatest gift from God. We should thank him every day for it and to appreciate it very much. We shouldn't take it for granted and think God should give us that whenever we want it. May 1963 be enriched with good health to all His children.

9—Good Friends: The New Year may you find lots of good friends, not the ones who will show you how to drink and to gamble. Those are not worth a dime a dozen, but the good Friends that will be helpful and an inspiration to you in your life.

10—Goodness: To be good is not hard. The word temptation gets in the way a great deal and by appearing in our weak minds it destroys the joy of being good. But we can overcome it by taking the will power and say as well as do — I will not be tempted by others in doing evil. So may 1963 find all of us free from temptation by the use of will power. That is all it takes.

11—Contentment: To live a contented life in 1963 can be had by studying and looking at all of God's beauty of the universe and to get interested in something that you like and in return you will be much better around your dear ones and friends.

12—Gratitude: Try in 1963 to be grateful to everyone, but especially to your parents and teachers while they are with you, and then being grateful to God who will look after you when your dear ones are gone and your teachers have finished with you.

No Camping Law

West Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

What I'm going to tell you might be of interest to hundreds of hunters of this area. It also could save them hundreds of dollars.

In Tensas Parish there is a No Camping law of the Wild Life Commission which says you must get a permit from the court house in St. Joseph, La., that costs $5.

Should a hunter camp anywhere he must get written permission from the landowner and a $5 permit from St. Joseph court house. Also, he must get permission to shoot does from the landowner, or it is not legal during the doe season.

Should he fail to do this and a state game agent checks him he will file charges. The bond is $38 per person cash or $50 property bond. There are no signs down there warning people of the No Camping Law. The Wild Life Commission does not put it on the hunting regulations either.

A party of four of us camped about six miles from New Light near 4-Way Grocery December 26. The game agent came by and filed charges against us for camping without a permit. We had a written permit from the landowner, Mr. Lee Miles of 4-Way Grocery, to hunt and camp on his property, but because we knew nothing of the Wild Life No Camping Law it cost us $152. I'm very surprised to know our Wild Life Commission would have laws like this and not have them published or posted in these hunting areas.

During these last days of deer season there will be many fined as we were. All the landowners we talked with were unaware of the law in their own parish.

Kennedy's Cigars

President Still Smoking Cubans Despite Importation Ban

Secretary Dean Rusk is the source of this intriguing bit of information.

It was disclosed at a social gathering in the State Department during the recent holidays. Much to the surprise of newsmen, Rusk came early and stayed late. Usually he drops in briefly and hurries off. This time he had several drinks, and was most affable and chatty.

Taking advantage of this exceptional opportunity, one reporter on the chance of getting a Cuban clue, asked, "Mr. Secretary, without revealing any policy secrets can you tell us when we might get our Cuban cigars back?"

With a smile Rusk replied, "If you're really interested, I'll tell you how you can obtain them." When the correspondent nodded eagerly, Rusk continued, "Go to one of your diplomatic friends whose country has a mission in Havana and ask him to get you a supply of these cigars."

At this another reporter chimed in. "But Mr. Secretary, that wouldn't be patriotic."

"Come, come now," chuckled Rusk. "Surely you have been around Washington long enough to have lost your virginity?"

"How did you find out about this contraband?" asked the first newsman.

"Well," explained Rusk, "that's how the president gets his cigars."

The State Department chief threw no light on whether foreign embassies present Cuban cigars to the president, or just how they do reach him. But Rusk left no doubt that the president is enjoying banned Cuban cigars.

"You will find," he said earnestly, "that we aren't hard to get along with."

WHO DID IT? — Congressional sources are buzzing over one startling answer to Washington's current big mystery — who was Attorney General Robert Kennedy's great good friend who put up $1 million of the $2.9 million in cash that Fidel Castro demanded in the ransom agreement on the liberation of the Bay of Pigs prisoners.

According to this congressional information, it was former Ambassador Joseph Kennedy, ailing father of the president and the attorney general.

There is no confirmation of any kind of this backstage word. Bobby has been on a skiing vacation in Colorado, and Justice Department officials close to him shrug their shoulders and claim they don't know.

But the report persists, and is given considerable credence in congressional quarters.

One White House authority asked about the matter replied, "I would say that in due time full disclosure will be made of the entire ransom transaction; who gave what and how much. This deal is still incomplete, and until it is closed, it would be inadvisable to publicly air details. But I am quite sure that in the end everything will be made public."

One thing is certain: Regardless of what the administration does, there will be vehement congressional insistence for full accounting of the ransom affair.

INSIDE CUBA — A Russian four - engine IL - 18 transport plane is now operating on Cuba's main airline. The Soviet transport, flown by a Russian pilot and Cuban co - pilot, is used on the route between Havana and Mexico City . . . Morocco has purchased 200,000 tons of raw sugar from Castro, in a barter deal between the two countries . . . Motor transport is in such bad repair in Cuba that the Ministry of Transportation has established a round - the - clock towing service. According to the official announcement, this new enterprise will tow vehicles from any place in the interior, no matter how remote . . . Several so-called brigades, totaling more than 1,000 workers, are being organized to harvest the sugar cane crop in Oriente Province. These brigades have been designated the "Red Battalion," and after they finish harvesting in Oriente, they will be moved to other provinces. This Communist - conceived scheme is an effort to avoid the difficulties that caused serious harvesting losses in the last sugar crop . . . U. S. authorities are checking on reports that five women from this country will attend a so - called Women's Congress in Havana later this month.

SOCIAL WHIRL — The new Congress is convening amid a deluge of social invitations. Washington's weather is at its wintry worst, the legislative outlook is stormy and highly uncertain, but there is no dearth of free - loading and partygoing for the lawmakers. Starting this Sunday, with a reception for wives of new members, during the rest of the month there are several or more parties aimed at Congress every day, Sunday included. Biggest event is the January 18 celebration of the second anniversary of the New Frontier, featured by a $1000 - a - plate dinner followed by a $100 - a - seat variety show studded with Hollywood and Broadway stars . . . Representative James Auchincloss, R-N. J., gave the most unusual Christmas party in the capital. He entertained the 64 congressional telephone operators. Auchincloss thoughtfully provided a bus to transport them to the hotel where he gave the party, that featured "live" eggnog and a lavish buffet. Elizabeth Cole, chief operator and dean of the group, related that the operators man a 29-position switchboard 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and handle an average of 50,000 calls daily.

Tax 'Compromise'

Many Agree Easing Restrictive Rates Can Help Business

In 1962 we asked ourselves one vitally right question about the U. S. economy: Is the oppressive income tax structure we created at a time of global war a key reason business has failed to grow fast enough in recent years to take up the slack in production and employment? In 1962, the answer "yes!" emerged with remarkable unanimity among fiscal "conservatives" and "liberals," Republicans and Democrats, businessmen and labor leaders.

As a result of asking ourselves that right question and coming to that answer in 1962 the odds are the brightest in years that in 1963 Congress will overhaul our corporations.

Congress is about to convene. After the usual formalities, it will hear the President's messages, get to work. Overshadowing all other domestic legislation will be the call for tax reduction - reform.

It is already abundantly obvious that there will be major disagreements in Congress on the tax overhaul — its form, timing, size, impact on consumer and business spending patterns.

It is obvious too that getting tax reductions through this Congress will be no cinch in view of the facts that the new budget will be billions in the red for the third year in a row, the national debt is climbing to an all - time high and just the interest paid on this debt is now taking more than $10 billion of our tax money each year.

Let's, therefore, put a few basic points in perspective.

(1) Just about every informed, objective observer recognizes the danger to our nation of budget deficits on top of budget deficits. Years of red ink in a nation's budget can undermine its credit and the buying power of its currency just as years of red ink in a family's budget can undermine its credit and buying power. When Senator Byrd, the Virginia Democrat who heads the powerful Senate Finance Committee, warns of the perils in budget deficits, no one scoffs. The perils exist.

(2) Just about every informed, objective observer now agrees that our high income tax rates are a drag on our economy, that they blunt recoveries, encourage recessions, weaken incentives. The agreement on this is truly extraordinary.

(3) Just about every informed, objective observer realizes it is politically unrealistic to expect that federal spending will be cut as much as taxes are reduced—which is Byrd's demand. The President has said it plainly. Non - defense spending will be held near current levels but spending for defense, space and debt interest is going up. Regardless of how much you sympathize with Byrd's view, this is fact.

(4) Just about every informed, objective observer admits that if our economy continues moving as sluggisly as it has been for year, it will not produce enough taxes to cover government spending. We will pile new deficit on new deficit, our national debt will soar, our interest burden will rise even more, our unemployment rate will stay stickily high, our demands for goods will not be big enough to spur industry into hiking its spending for essential modernization - expansion programs.

[illegible] A Look Behind The Headlines

Medicare Bill Will Come Up Again

Efforts Will Stir Up Much New Resistance

EDITOR'S NOTE: This year, the Kennedy administration is committed to make new efforts for a comprehensive medical care plan for the aged. These efforts are certain to stir new resistance from opponents. Here's a look at issues involved in this controversy vital to more than 17 million Americans.

By BERNARD GAVZER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Room & board, at $30 per day:	$1,020.00
Laboratory	$75.00
Drugs	$121.00
x-Ray	$71.00
Operating room	$75.00
Blood	$35.00
Prosthesis	$67.50
Electrocardiagram	$15.00
Catheter	$5.00
Total	$1,484.50

This is a hospital bill.

It was presented to a 69-year-old woman who fractured a hip and was hospitalized in a semi-private room 34 days.

When her son saw it, he furrowed his brow and said, "—."

"When mama gets sick, they want the best," says a hospital director. "The best room, best doctor, best surgeon. They don't know how much the best can cost."

The cost can be astronomical.

No one knows this any better than the 17½ million people who are most likely to suffer serious illness—those 65 and over.

It is the one thing almost all of them have thought about.

"Well, Sir, I'd say I'm a bit better off than a good number of other retired people," says James Teague, a frail thin man of 69 from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

"I have an income of $3,000 a year, and I've got $8,000. I can put my hands on it in one minute if need be. If I had a serious illness, I'd go to a hospital because I have Blue Cross. Even so, a long illness could take all my savings. Of course, I could refuse to use my savings and die. That would be the easy way out."

Medical care for the aged is a complex social issue.

Medicare

Insurance companies, through grand campaigns, promote special, group-type health insurance for those 65 and over.

What is at the core of this argument? What do older people now have to help them? How would medicare compare?

There are other basic questions that add to the complexity: What is old? How sick are these people? How much money do they have? What do they fear?

In a bus station in Chicago, a 75-year-old man grew angry, saying:

"People don't understand what is going on. The newspapers and television don't tell them. Two things nobody can avoid is death and old age. If something don't happen for old people, this country is going to suffer. Not now, but in 100 years. The orange gets rotten little by little, not in one minute."

The argument has a dog-chasing-his-tail quality about it. It takes this form:

The 17½ million elderly, bound by age and the common problem of paying medical bills, represent a growing political bloc. As such, they command the attention of any administration. So they are a matter of prime concern to—

The Kennedy administration, which says they have to be protected against exorbitant costs of medical care, and proposes this be done through increased Social Security taxes, a scheme opposed by—

The American Medical Association, which argues that medicare—as the administration's King-Anderson bill is known—opens the door to government intrusion in the affairs of hospital and patient, and doctor and patient, and says help for those who need it is already provided through—

The Kerr-Mills law, in effect in 24 states, and financed by federal and state funds. It has been criticized as being as restrictive as—

The private insurance plans—Golden 65, Senior Security, New York 65, to name a few—offering insurance without medical examination, with renewal guarantees, at group rates, which critics say is too expense for most of—

The 17½ million people 65 and over.

Dr. Lowell T. Coggeshall, vice president of the University of Chicago, analyzed the controversy in an address to medical school graduates.

". . . There is no dispute by either side over the principle that tax dollars will be spent for medical services," Coggeshall declared. "One side (the administration) believes the Social Security mechanism should be expanded to provide for the partial payment of illness costs for elderly beneficiaries. The other (represented by the AMA) bitterly opposes this method of financing, and says general tax funds should match state tax assistance funds for the needy older person . . .

"When we talk about the Kerr-Mills and the King-Anderson bills, we are talking about proposals for dispensing tax dollars. Actually, the issues are not those of medicine and the conflicts are not those of science. The debate concerns public policy on a social problem with heavy political overtones."

The definitions and explanations, claims and counter - claims, charges and counter - charges, have befuddled numerous people, particularly those toward whom the medical care plans are aimed.

When it comes to telling one plan from another, most people want to know two things:

The Cost

How much will it cost and what are the benefits?

The answer can be demonstrated in applying the different plans to actual hospital bills.

The woman whose bill is shown in detail, except for telephone charges of $6.80, had no insurance of any kind. A widow, she was supported by Social Security and pension payments as well as contributions from her four children. On entering the hospital, she had $307.29 in a savings account, $68.42 in a special checking account, $11.75 and two subway tokens in her purse.

Assuming she took every cent and applied it to the bill, there'd still be a balance of $1,097.04.

How would the Kerr-Mills law be applied in this case?

The Kerr-Mills law provides federal grants-in-aid to states for aged persons who are not getting old-age assistance but still lack the money to pay for necessary medical care.

The money comes from general tax funds. As the law is written, benefits cover everything—doctor, hospital, drugs, nursing care, nursing home. But the benefits vary according to the way each state has designed its enabling legislation.

The woman wouldn't have to contribute a cent to get these benefits. But she'd have to prove she has very meager funds. In some states, the inability to pay also would have to be shown by responsible relatives, such as sons and daughters, and in still others any property she possessed could be sold to satisfy part of the cost.

Medicare, as it is described in the King-Anderson bill, provides benefits of 90 days in patient hospital care, with a $10 per day deduction for the first 9 days; skilled nursing home care for 120 days, and possibly 180 days; home health services with a maximum of 240 visits per year, and outpatient diagnostic services.

It does not cover doctor's bills.

Had this woman been eligible—she would, since she is already receiving Social Security benefits—her share of the hospital bill would have been $90—the deductible. Medicare would have taken care of $1,394.50.

She would have paid no Social Security taxes for this since she already has passed retirement age. Financing of this program comes through boosting Social Security taxes by one quarter of one per cent, or a penny out of each $4, with a maximum contribution by an employe of $13 a year.

Had this woman been covered by an insurance plan through a union or religious society or service organization, the benefits could have satisfied from 30 to 90 per cent of the bill.

The range on such plans is wide but a typical one would have cost her $96 a year for her share of the premiums. This plan would have paid $1,232.15 of the $1,484.50 bill, leaving her with $252.35 to pay out of her pocket. This would have practically emptied her bank account.

Suppose this woman, or her children, had become interested in insurance plans which offer health insurance with no age limit, no medical exam, no premium hikes, and renewal guarantees.

Typical of these is the Golden 65 of Continental Casualty Co. of Chicago. There are three parts to the plan. They are called 65 Plus, 5,000 Medical and 10,000 Reserve.

65 Plus provides first dollar coverage in the hospital and would have given benefits of $320 for room and board, since there is a maximum of $10 per day for 31 days of each illness, and $160 maximum allowed for the other items, such as laboratory, etc. She would have a balance of $1,074.50 to pay.

$5,000 Medical doesn't apply in this since the bill itemizes only inpatient hospital costs.

10,000 Reserve would have given these benefits: $25 a day for room and board, up to 90 days, and 75 per cent of all includable expenses, after a $500 deduction.

She would have received $850 for room and board, $464.50 for other expenses, for a total of $1,314.50, minus $500 deductible leaves $814.50, of which 75 per cent comes to $610.87. Add $410 provided by 65 Plus — assuming she had both, rather than just 65 plus alone—and she would have collected $1,020.87, leaving her an out of pocket payment of $463.63.

The premium is $6.50 a month for 65 Plus, and $9.50 monthly for $10,000 Reserve.

Well Fixed

How well fixed are the nation's elderly to absorb medical costs?

The University of Michigan research center recently reported results of a survey into the financial status of the elderly.

The statistics were interpreted by the AMA in September as indicating that persons 65 and over are "substantially better off on the average than younger Americans."

However, on Oct. 25, the center reported that "low incomes are commonly temporary among younger families and permanent among the aged." It further said that families whose head is 65 years old or older, and single individuals over 65 "have substantially lower income than younger families or individuals."

President-elect Dr. Edward Annis of the AMA maintains that medicare "will lower the quality and availability of hospital services throughout our country. It will stand between the patient and his doctor. It will serve as forerunner of a different system of medicine for all Americans."

A doctor who disagrees is Dr. William A. Brooks, a New York psychiatrist and strong advocate of medicare. By AMA estimate only about 3,000 of the nation's 268,775 physicians publicly share Dr. Brooks' point of view.

"There is no provision in medicare restricting free choice of the doctor," says Dr. Brooks. "This is utterly untrue. It is done to frighten people. After all, patients are very attached to their doctors and if you tell an aged lady who is attached to Dr. Jones that medicare will prevent her from seeing him, she will oppose medicare because she likes him."

Medicare will again be presented to the Congress—and it will be supported and opposed vigorously.

If it is enacted, it won't be so startling a social innovation. Prepaid hospital care was enacted during the administration of John Adams, second president of the United States. It required seamen to make compulsory payments of 20 cents a month. The funds were used to build hospitals and provide salaried physicians for the care of seamen. It was also the beginning of the Public Health Service.

Brazilians Decide On Rule Monday

By FRANK BRUTTO

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—In a referendum Sunday Brazilians are expected to give President Joao Goulart the weapon he says he needs to save the country from drowning in red ink.

The referendum, being held on the day of the Feast of the Wise Men, will decide how the government is to be run.

All indications point to a return to a strong presidency, similar to that in the United States.

The voters are expected to end a system called parliamentarianism, which curbs the president's authority.

This has been in effect since September 1961. When the mercurial Janio Quadros suddenly resigned from the presidency, the office went to Vice-President "Jango" Goulart.

Parliament, fearing the leftist reputation of the young onetime protege of dictator Getulio Vargas, passed an act dividing authority and stripping the presidency of much of its power.

SUFFERED

Since then Brazil has suffered profound political and economic crisis. It has been marked at its peaks by military intervention and strikes. Inflation has increased the cost of living nearly 60 per cent in the past year.

Since May 1961 the value of the cruzeiro, Brazil's monetary unit, has dropped radically in relation to the dollar. In May 1961 it took 200 cruzeiros to buy a dollar's worth of imports. Now it takes about 850.

Finance Minister Miguel Calmon says foreign investments have dropped to $62 million in 1962 from $266 million in 1961. This was largely because of a law restricting how much money foreign investors could send abroad.

The nation's deficit has snowballed.

Hitting people closer home, black beans and rice have almost disappeared from normal markets. Adults and children have stood in line for hours to get rationed amounts of these dietary staples; regular sources of supply dried up because of the uncertain financial situation.

Through all this, Goulart has said he lacked the authority to act on social and economic reforms. He proposes a three-year plan to expand the economy.

British Health Program Still Finds Many Who Don't Like It

EDITOR'S NOTE: The 14-year-old state - operated medical service, long a cause of controversy in the British Isles and elsewhere, is termed generally a successful enterprise now. But there are still misgivings about some aspects of its operation, and many doctors are plugging for changes.)

By JOHN GALE

LONDON (AP)—Fourteen years ago, Britain's doctors were united for better or worse with a state-run National Health Service.

The marriage, on the whole, appears to be succeeding.

Officials claim the nation's health has never been better. Britons are growing bigger and living longer.

Diseases that once were the scourge of childhood have been put on the run. Diphtheria killed only five children of school age last year, polio only 12, tuberculosis 9. Scarlet fever is no longer a menace.

Most of all, the National Health Service has succeeded in the high purpose it set out to achieve in the aftermath of World War II. Nobody is barred by lack of means from receiving proper medical attention. With the state picking up most of the bill, Britain's 52 million people can at last afford to be ill.

THE CAST

The cost of keeping the nation healthy is now running at about 850 million pounds—$2,380 million—a year. It is expected to increase in the next few years as it has almost annually since the health service was launched.

But in Britain, only a tiny minority of the medical profession would like to see the NHS scrapped. Some 600 doctors have remained in private practice. The great majority — approximately 35,000—work in the service of the state.

There is today widespread acceptance of the social factors that brought the NHS into being. No dispute exists over the principles underlying the scheme. But in medical circles, there are many misgivings over the shortcomings of the service and its method of operation.

A committee representing the country's nine leading medical bodies recently completed a four-year review of this massive British social experiment.

It reported: "In general we feel that the NHS has proved of great benefit to the community, but there are many defects and omissions." The committee then listed a total of 232 conclusions, many of them critical of the government's handling of the scheme.

One of its chief conclusions was that the health service is too loosely integrated. The NHS has three main operating branches—the family doctors in general practice, the hospital services and the public health authorities. Many physicians complain there is too little liaison between the three, resulting in duplication of effort and a general loss of efficiency.

The committee asserted that the three-way division of responsibility had prevented the system "from operating successfully as a team."

COMPLAINTS

Medical quarters also often voice complaints that the government does not work closely enough with the profession in planning such projects as hospital building programs; that the government spends too little on medical research—about $14 million a year; that doctors are overworked and underpaid; casualty and accident services below standard; medical recruiting lagging and too little provision made for the care of the aged and maternity cases.

There is also a general desire in the profession to see an element of private practice retained and it is frequently charged that the NHS has tended to stifle its preservation.

"Whatever arrangements are made by the state to provide medical care," said the review committee, "there will always be a section of the community which prefers to pay the doctor directly for his services by personal contract."

Among the foremost critics of the NHS is the Fellowship for Freedom in Medicine which has about 1,500 adherents among medical practitioners.

The fellowship maintains that the NHS is top heavy, cuts the family doctor off from hospital work and pays him with no regard for his experience, ability or conscience. In fact, health service doctors are paid 19 shillings 6 pence—$2.73—per patient per year with an extra 14 shillings—$1.96—for every patient within the range of 500 to 1,700 on his list.

With a permitted maximum of 3,500 patients, the most a doctor can make out of the NHS is around 4,000 pounds—$11,200—a year.

Said Dr. James Maxwell Alston, a consultant pathologist and honorary secretary of the fellowship:

"Our main objection to the form of health service chosen for this country is that it is too rigid.

"We all accept that there must be some system of helping people to provide against illness. But here, there is too much central control and the service suffers as a result.

"In 14 years, the government has made little progress. It has built no new hospitals in the whole of that time. It spends far too little on medical research.

"It enforces a rigid division of medical work with general practitioners in one category, hospital doctors in another and public health authorities in a third. The result has been that the general practitioners don't do as much specialized work in the hospitals as they used to and there has been a general weakening of the profession.

"I and the people with me in this organization would never want to scrap the underlying purpose of this health service.

"But given the chance, I would scrap the service in its present form and start again on entirely new lines."

Dr. Alston said there had been too little consideration in Britain of health service plans such as Blue Shield and Blue Cross, operated in the United States. "These schemes deserve our attention," he said, "and might enable us to avoid some of the difficulties that we have met."

On a different level, the British public has its own personal complaints about the health service. Readers wrote to the papers to complain that little Tommy was kept waiting for six months before his tonsils were removed. Or that visiting hours at hospital are too restricted.

The other big public complaint is over-crowded surgeries. Fewer than 10 per cent of NHS doctors operate an appointments system. As a result, patients have been kept for up to two hours waiting for the 20 people in front of them to be seen.

Dr. John Fry, in partnership with his younger brother Lionel, cares for the health of some 7,000 people in a suburban middle class area of London. He recently introduced an appointments system.

"I got tired of people coming in to see me suffering from some stress after sitting two hours in the waiting room," he said.

Dr. Fry, 40, served with the Royal Navy in World War II and had one year in private practice before the health service came in. He now enthusiastically supports the system.

"Of course we were apprehensive at the start," he said. "I was worried that the relationship between my patients and myself would be changed, that my services would be abused and that there would be interference by the government.

"But none of this has happened. It is a misconception that there is a lot of government interference. I account to nobody for my medical therapies inside the boundaries set by the ethics of the profession.

"There is no abuse of my services, although there has been a slight increase in the people that come in with trivial ailments. But that is inevitable with no financial barrier between them and me.

"As for my relationship with my patients, it has never been better. The patients have no fear or anxiety about coming to see me. I have no fear or anxiety about not getting paid.

Der Spiegel Affair Hurt West Germany

By JOHN O. KOEHLER

BONN, Germany (AP) — A lot of things can happen when a German editor goes to jail on suspicion of treason.

His main target, the defense minister, is driven out of office . . . Chancellor Konrad Adenauer is forced to reorganize his government . . . And the editor's publication, Der Spiegel, enjoys a wave of popular support, with its circulation rising from 500,000 to more than 700,000.

These are fruits so far of the "Spiegel Affair" which has cut a broad stroke across German affairs since October and thrown into controversy many questions involving freedom of the press and the way justice is administered in postwar Germany.

Two executives of the news magazine Spiegel — Mirror — are still in jail for investigation. They are Rudolf Augstein, publisher of the weekly, and one of his editors, Hans Schmelz.

Federal court officials say it will take at least two more months to determine whether they or any of eight other persons detained in the case should be brought to trial.

The other eight — five Spiegel staffers, a colonel of the intelligence service, a colonel in the defense ministry and a businessman —were released after spending from a few days to nearly two months behind bars. None, however, has been officially cleared.

The suspicion of treason centers on an article picturing West German armed forces as in sad shape and generally discrediting Defense Minister Franz-Josef Strauss. The magazine had long been attacking Strauss, a fact prompting immediate suspicion that he was behind the government action against the publication.

Public indignation over the Spiegel arrests was the most severe outburst in the Bonn republic's 13-year history. It toppled Adenauer's government and forced him to drop Strauss in forming a new cabinet.

Adenauer has steadfastly defended the government action against the Spiegel. He says that neither press freedom nor the nation's legal system has been in danger at any time. He suggested the whole uproar could have been avoided had the press used more restraint.

Most editors appear to have adopted a wait-and-see attitude. One editor of a large metropolitan newspaper said privately, however, he felt that freedom of the press had been seriously threatened.

"I believe it is only due to the violent and passionate reaction of the public that things did not get worse," he added.

This seems generally to be the man-in-the-street opinion.

Tax Reduction Talk Prevalent

(EDITOR'S — President Kennedy wants taxes cut. So do business, labor, and the citizen. But the new Congress will have to cope with some difficult problems, plus some strong-willed men who hold widely different views about what should be done and when.)

By EDMOND LEBRETON

WASHINGTON (AP)—There is much talk of tax reduction as the new 88th Congress gathers for its first session, starting Wednesday. But the path ahead is thorny and the outcome uncertain.

Certainly the refund checks or the extra cash in pay envelopes are not just around the corner. In fact the reduction, if it comes, may not come nearly as early as President Kennedy and some of his key advisers would like.

Two other strong-willed men—both also highly influential in Congress—will have much to say about the chances, form, and timing of tax reduction and reform legislation. They are Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., who heads the Senate Finance Committee.

TAX REVISION

Kennedy wants tax revision, with a rate cut as soon as possible, to stimulate the economy and help him make good on his move - the - country - forward promises.

Mills wants tax reform, with rate cuts at least partly offset by loophole plugging to hold down the revenue loss right from the start.

Byrd says curbs on spending and a balanced budget should be a condition for any tax cut.

Back of the hesitancy of Mills and Byrd, and of many other members of Congress, is concern over continued large deficits in the federal budget.

Kennedy himself said in his Dec. 14 speech on his tax program." "I had hoped to present it in an atmosphere of a balanced budget."

But these hopes weren't realized. Instead of the thin surplus tentatively forecast a year ago, this year's government operations will result in a deficit of $7.8 billion, by Treasury estimates, following hard on the $6.377 billion deficit of the preceding year.

In the face of such figures, tax cut advocates have their work cut out for them as they argue for reducing revenues by $6 billion to $10 billion, the range usually discussed. Smaller cuts, most believe, would be ineffectual. Even a $6-billion cut might add less than $100 to the annual spending money of an average middle income family.

Spotlight: A Look Behind The Headlines

Medicare Bill Will Come Up Again

Efforts Will Stir Up Much New Resistance

EDITOR'S NOTE: This year, the Kennedy administration is committed to make new efforts for a comprehensive medical care plan for the aged. These efforts are certain to stir new resistance from opponents. Here's a look at issues involved in this controversy vital to more than 17 million Americans.

By BERNARD GAVZER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Room & board, at $30 per day:	$1,020.00
Laboratory	$75.00
Drugs	$121.00
x-Ray	$71.00
Operating room	$75.00
Blood	$35.00
Prosthesis	$67.50
Electrocardiagram	$15.00
Catheter	$5.00
Total	$1,484.50

This is a hospital bill.

It was presented to a 69-year-old woman who fractured a hip and was hospitalized in a semi-private room 34 days.

When her son saw it, he furrowed his brow and said, "—."

"When mama gets sick, they want the best," says a hospital director. "The best room, best doctor, best surgeon. They don't know how much the best can cost."

The cost can be astronomical.

No one knows this any better than the 17½ million people who are most likely to suffer serious illness—those 65 and over.

It is the one thing almost all of them have thought about.

"Well, Sir, I'd say I'm a bit better off than a good number of other retired people," says James Teague, a frail thin man of 69 from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

"I have an income of $3,000 a year, and I've got $8,000. I can put my hands on it in one minute if need be. If I had a serious illness, I'd go to a hospital because I have Blue Cross. Even so, a long illness could take all my savings. Of course, I could refuse to use my savings and die. That would be the easy way out."

Medical care for the aged is a complex social issue.

Medicare

The government supports a Social Security scheme called medicare.

Insurance companies, through grand campaigns, promote special, group-type health insurance for those 65 and over.

What is at the core of this argument? What do older people now have to help them? How would medicare compare?

There are other basic questions that add to the complexity: What is old? How sick are these people? How much money do they have? What do they fear?

In a bus station in Chicago, a 75-year-old man grew angry, saying:

"People don't understand what is going on. The newspapers and television don't tell them. Two things nobody can avoid is death and old age. If something don't happen for old people, this country is going to suffer. Not now, but in 100 years. The orange gets rotten little by little, not in one minute."

The argument has a dog-chasing-his-tail quality about it. It takes this form:

The 17½ million elderly, bound by age and the common problem of paying medical bills, represent a growing political bloc. As such, they command the attention of any administration. So they are a matter of prime concern to—

The Kennedy administration, which says they have to be protected against exorbitant costs of medical care, and proposes this be done through increased Social Security taxes, a scheme opposed by—

The American Medical Association, which argues that medicare —as the administration's King-Anderson bill is known—opens the door to government intrusion in the affairs of hospital and patient, and doctor and patient, and says help for those who need it is already provided through—

The Kerr-Mills law, in effect in 24 states, and financed by federal and state funds. It has been criticized as being as restrictive as—

The private insurance plans—Golden 65, Senior Security, New York 65, to name a few—offering insurance without medical examination, with renewal guarantees, at group rates, which critics say is too expense for most of—

The 17½ million people 65 and over.

Dr. Lowell T. Coggeshall, vice president of the University of Chicago, analyzed the controversy in an address to medical school graduates.

". . . There is no dispute by either side over the principle that tax dollars will be spent for medical services," Coggeshall declared. "One side (the administration) believes the Social Security mechanism should be expanded to provide for the partial payment of illness costs for elderly beneficiaries. The other (represented by the AMA) bitterly opposes this method of financing, and says general tax funds should match state tax assistance funds for the needy older person . . .

"When we talk about the Kerr-Mills and the King-Anderson bills, we are talking about proposals for dispensing tax dollars. Actually, the issues are not those of medicine and the conflicts are not those of science. The debate concerns public policy on a social problem with heavy political overtones."

The definitions and explanations claims and counter - claims, charges and counter - charges, have befuddled numerous people, particularly those toward whom the medical care plans are aimed.

When it comes to telling one plan from another, most people want to know two things:

The Cost

How much will it cost and what are the benefits?

The answer can be demonstrated in applying the different plans to actual hospital bills.

The woman whose bill is shown in detail, except for telephone charges of $6.80, had no insurance of any kind. A widow, she was supported by Social Security and pension payments as well as contributions from her four children. On entering the hospital, she had $307.29 in a savings account, $68.42 in a special checking account, $11.75 and two subway tokens in her purse.

Assuming she took every cent and applied it to the bill, there'd still be a balance of $1,097.04.

How would the Kerr-Mills law be applied in this case?

The Kerr-Mills law provides federal grants-in-aid to states for aged persons who are not getting old-age assistance but still lack the money to pay for necessary medical care.

The money comes from general tax funds. As the law is written, benefits cover everything—doctor, hospital, drugs, nursing care, nursing home. But the benefits vary according to the way each state has designed its enabling legislation.

The woman wouldn't have to contribute a cent to get these benefits. But she'd have to prove she has very meager funds. In some states, the inability to pay also would have to be shown by responsible relatives, such as sons and daughters, and in still others any property she possessed could be sold to satisfy part of the cost.

Medicare, as it is described in the King-Anderson bill, provides benefits of 90 days in patient hospital care, with a $10 per day deduction for the first 9 days; skilled nursing home care for 120 days, and possibly 180 days; home health services with a maximum of 240 visits per year, and outpatient diagnostic services.

It does not cover doctor's bills.

Had this woman been eligible—she would, since she is already receiving Social Security benefits —her share of the hospital bill would have been $90—the deductible. Medicare would have taken care of $1,394.50.

She would have paid no Social Security taxes for this since she already has passed retirement age. Financing of this program comes through boosting Social Security taxes by one quarter of one per cent, or a penny out of each $4, with a maximum contribution by an employe of $13 a year.

Had this woman been covered by an insurance plan through a union or religious society or service organization, the benefits could have satisfied from 80 to 90 per cent of the bill.

The range on such plans is wide but a typical one would have cost her $96 a year for her share of the premiums. This plan would have paid $1.232.15 of the $1,484.50 bill, leaving her with $252.35 to pay out of her pocket. This would have practically emptied her bank account.

Suppose this woman, or her children, had become interested in insurance plans which offer health insurance with no age limit, no medical exam, no premium hikes, and renewal guarantees.

Typical of these is the Golden 65 of Continental Casualty Co. of Chicago. There are three parts to the plan. They are called 65 Plus, 5,000 Medical and 10,000 Reserve.

65 Plus provides first dollar coverage in the hospital and would have given benefits of $320 for room and board, since there is a maximum of $10 per day for 31 days of each illness, and $100 maximum allowed for the other items, such as laboratory, etc. She would have a balance of $1,074.50 to pay.

$5,000 Medical doesn't apply in this since the bill itemizes only inpatient hospital costs.

10,000 Reserve would have given these benefits: $25 a day for room and board, up to 90 days, and 75 per cent of all includable expenses, after a $500 deduction.

She would have received $850 for room and board, $464.50 for other expenses, for a total of $1,314.50, minus $500 deductible leaves $814.50, of which 75 per cent comes to $610.87. Add $410 provided by 65 Plus — assuming she had both, rather than just 65 plus alone—and she would have collected $1,020.87, leaving her an out of pocket payment of $463.63. The premium is $6.50 a month for 65 Plus, and $9.50 monthly for $10,000 Reserve.

Well Fixed

How well fixed are the nation's elderly to absorb medical costs?

The University of Michigan research center recently reported results of a survey into the financial status of the elderly.

The statistics were interpreted by the AMA in September as indicating that persons 65 and over are "substantially better off on the average than younger Americans."

However, on Oct. 25, the center reported that "low incomes are commonly temporary among younger families and permanent among the aged." It further said that families whose head is 65 years old or older, and single individuals over 65 "have substantially lower income than younger families or individuals."

President-elect Dr. Edward Annis of the AMA maintains that medicare "will lower the quality and availability of hospital services throughout our country. It will stand between the patient and his doctor. It will serve as forerunner of a different system of medicine for all Americans."

A doctor who disagrees is Dr. William A. Brooks, a New York psychiatrist and strong advocate of medicare. By AMA estimate only about 3,000 of the nation's 268,775 physicians publicly share Dr. Brooks' point of view.

"There is no provision in medicare restricting free choice of the doctor," says Dr. Brooks. "This is utterly untrue. It is done to frighten people. After all, patients are very attached to their doctors and if you tell an aged lady who is attached to Dr. Jones that medicare will prevent her from seeing him, she will oppose medicare because she likes him."

Medicare will again be presented to the Congress—and it will be supported and opposed vigorously.

If it is enacted, it won't be so startling a social innovation. Prepaid hospital care was enacted during the administration of John Adams, second president of the United States. It required seamen to make compulsory payments of 20 cents a month. The funds were used to build hospitals and provide salaried physicians for the care of seamen. It was also the beginning of the Public Health Service.

Brazilians Decide On Rule Monday

By FRANK BRUTTO

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—In a referendum Sunday Brazilians are expected to give President Joao Goulart the weapon he says he needs to save the country from drowning in red ink.

The referendum, being held on the day of the Feast of the Wise Men, will decide how the government is to be run.

All indications point to a return to a strong presidency, similar to that in the United States.

The voters are expected to end a system called parliamentarianism, which curbs the president's authority.

This has been in effect since September 1961. When the mercurial Janio Quadros suddenly resigned from the presidency, the office went to Vice-President "Jango" Goulart.

Parliament, fearing the leftist reputation of the young onetime protege of dictator Getulio Vargas, passed an act dividing authority and stripping the presidency of much of its power.

SUFFERED

Since then Brazil has suffered profound political and economic crisis. It has been marked at its peaks by military intervention and strikes. Inflation has increased the cost of living nearly 60 per cent in the past year.

Since May 1961 the value of the cruzeiro, Brazil's monetary unit, has dropped radically in relation to the dollar. In May 1961 it took 200 cruzeiros to buy a dollar's worth of imports. Now it takes about 850.

Finance Minister Miguel Calmon says foreign investments have dropped to $62 million in 1962 from $266 million in 1961. This was largely because of a law restricting how much money foreign investors could send abroad.

The nation's deficit has snowballed.

Hitting people closer home, black beans and rice have almost disappeared from normal markets. Adults and children have stood in line for hours to get rationed amounts of these dietary staples; regular sources of supply dried up because of the uncertain financial situation.

Through all this, Goulart has said he lacked the authority to act on social and economic reforms. He proposes a three-year plan to expand the economy.

British Health Program Still Finds Many Who Don't Like It

EDITOR'S NOTE: The 14-year-old state - operated medical service, long a cause of controversy in the British Isles and elsewhere, is termed generally a successful enterprise now. But there are still misgivings about some aspects of its operation, and many doctors are plugging for changes.)

By JOHN GALE

LONDON (AP)—Fourteen years ago, Britain's doctors were united for better or worse with a state-run National Health Service.

The marriage, on the whole, appears to be succeeding.

Officials claim the nation's health has never been better. Britons are growing bigger and living longer.

Diseases that once were the scourge of childhood have been put on the run. Diphtheria killed only five children of school age last year, polio only 12, tuberculosis 9. Scarlet fever is no longer a menace.

Most of all, the National Health Service has succeeded in the high purpose it set out to achieve in the aftermath of World War II. Nobody is barred by lack of means from receiving proper medical attention. With the state picking up most of the bill, Britain's 52 million people can at last afford to be ill.

This seems generally to be the man-in-the-street opinion.

Tax Reduction Talk Prevalent

(EDITOR'S — President Kennedy wants taxes cut. So do business, labor, and the citizen. But the new Congress will have to cope with some difficult problems, plus some strong-willed men who hold widely different views about what should be done and when.)

By EDMOND LEBRETON

WASHINGTON (AP)—There is much talk of tax reduction as the new 88th Congress gathers for its first session, starting Wednesday. But the path ahead is thorny and the outcome uncertain.

Certainly the refund checks or the extra cash in pay envelopes are not just around the corner. In fact the reduction, if it comes, may not come nearly as early as President Kennedy and some of his key advisers would like.

Two other strong-willed men—both also highly influential in Congress—will have much to say about the chances, form, and timing of tax reduction and reform legislation. They are Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., who heads the Senate Finance Committee.

TAX REVISION

Kennedy wants tax revision, with a rate cut as soon as possible, to stimulate the economy and help him make good on his move - the - country - forward promises.

Mills wants tax reform, with rate cuts at least partly offset by loophole plugging to hold down the revenue loss right from the start.

Byrd says curbs on spending and a balanced budget should be a condition for any tax cut.

Back of the hesitancy of Mills and Byrd, and of many other members of Congress, is concern over continued large deficits in the federal budget.

Kennedy himself said in his Dec. 14 speech on his tax program." "I had hoped to present it in an atmosphere of a balanced budget."

But these hopes weren't realized. Instead of the thin surplus tentatively forecast a year ago, this year's government operations will result in a deficit of $7.8 billion, by Treasury estimates, following hard on the $6.377 billion deficit of the preceding year.

In the face of such figures, tax cut advocates have their work cut out for them as they argue for reducing revenues by $6 billion to $10 billion, the range usually discussed. Smaller cuts, most believe, would be ineffectual. Even a $6-billion cut might add less than $100 to the annual spending money of an average middle income family.

NEW YORK (AP) — Lillian Hellman is at work on her first dramatic adaptation of a book.

The veteran playwright's project is "My Mother, My Father and Me," based upon "How Much?," by Burt Blechman. The theme is described as concerning "unloved oldsters, untried youths and unsung minority groups."

Benny Almost Made Comeback

By JOSEPH FINNIGAN

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jack Benny came perilously close to making a motion picture comeback recently, which would have filled the need for a violin-playing comedian-assuming there is such a void.

As a performer, Benny's popularity was first attained on radio, nurtured by a movie career which now appears in the dim past and cemented in television where he ranks with the best.

Benny almost returned to feature films recently in the multimillion dollar comedy "It's A Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World." He was supposed to play the police inspector's role which finally went to Spencer Tracy.

"I personally think the picture is better for Tracy," Benny said. "At the end of the picture he has the comedy scene and he's funny. It's sort of a pivot for the whole thing."

RULES OUT FILM

Benny's heavy television schedule ruled out the picture for him so the world must wait a little longer for Jack's comeback.

"If I ever found a real great picture I would do it," he said. "It I could get a movie as good as 'To Be or Not To Be,' I would have to make it.

"I was in the picture with Carole Lombard. It was one of the best comedies ever made, that's what everybody says. I made it about 1941 and it's still being played in foreign countries. It looks better now."

Benny is one of the first in Hollywood to joke about his own movies, especially his somewhat less than epic picture "The Horn Blows at Midnight."

Apparently nobody heard the horn because the film has never been considered an industry classic. But Benny made other films, some of which earned money.

TO DO SHOW

"Nearly all of my pictures made money," Benny said. "Out of 20 pictures I made, about 15 of them were good ones. Some that looked good then might not look so good now, though."

Benny has only four more CBS-TV shows to complete for the 1962-63 season, then it's off to New York for a Broadway show, his first in more than 30 years.

"I'm going to do two weeks in Toronto and then the Ziegfeld Theater in New York," the comedian said. "It'll be called 'Jack Benny on Broadway' and will be like a very intimate review, two acts."

Benny will unlimber his fiddle for the New York appearance.

"But not like I do in concerts," said Jack, a note of self-satisfaction in his reference to the classics.

Last week Strauss Playhouse echoed to the sound of dancing feet and voices lifted in song as try outs were held for "Annie Get Your Gun." On Wednesday night, over 100 aspirants appeared for auditioning by executive director Richard M. Clark and choreographer Bob Beard. Hilda McDonald undertook the chore of accompanist which we hope foreshadows her sharing the job of rehearsal pianist.

Conductor Eloy Fominaya and Technical Director Ray Lucero were also on hand, as well as all Little Theatre officers and a number of directors and trustees. The attendance on Wednesday night included both participants and spectators. Among those present were Betty Bandy, Jo Ann Bennett, Dorothy Blue, Bill Blythe, Scherck Bogen, Bethia Brown, Kathy Brown, Julius Cahn, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. SEEKING ROLLS

We know that they were joined on Thursday and Friday nights by other candidates for the many parts open in this big musical. With tryouts behind us and cast announcements expected soon, the crying need now is for backstage workers. Costumes and sets require people skilled with needle, sewing machine, carpentry tools or paintbrush. Anyone interested in this activity is invited to get in tough with Ray Lucero at FAirfax 2-1235 or Judy Evans at FAirfax 5-3200.

Later the show will need crews for properties, wardrobe, lights, sound and set changes. While technical knowledge of the theatre is not necessary, these jobs require quickness and dexterity in following schedules set by the director. Either Richard Clark or Ray Lucero will be glad to explain this type of backstage work.

Richard and Pat are just back from New York where they saw "Little Me," "Never Too Late," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," "How To Succeed," "Tchin Tchin," "Lord Pengo," "A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum," "A Thousand Clowns," "The Fantasticks," "Beyond The Fringe," and "Oh, Dad, Poor Dad." They enjoyed this trip even more than the previous ones and just managed to escape the severe weather.

It is a pleasure to repot that during the runs of "Gigi" and "Hansel and Gretel," late arrivals and "no shows" were reduced to a minimum. We discovered that the evening performances of "Hansel and Gretel" were far less popular than the matinees, but the total attendance of 1,200 young people and young in heart is encouraging for a repetition of a children's play at Christmas. We shall be grateful for suggestions of titles in this somewhat limited field.

SEEKING ROLLS

We know that they were joined on Thursday and Friday nights by other candidates for the many parts open in this big musical. With tryouts behind us and cast announcements expected soon, the crying need now is for backstage workers. Costumes and sets require people skilled with needle, sewing machine, carpentry tools or paintbrush. Anyone interested in this activity is invited to get in tough with Ray Lucero at FAirfax 2-1235 or Judy Evans at FAirfax 5-3200.

Later the show will need crews for properties, wardrobe, lights, sound and set changes. While technical knowledge of the theatre is not necessary, these jobs require quickness and dexterity in following schedules set by the director. Either Richard Clark or Ray Lucero will be glad to explain this type of backstage work.

Richard and Pat are just back from New York where they saw "Little Me," "Never Too Late," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," "How To Succeed," "Tchin Tchin," "Lord Pengo," "A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum," "A Thousand Clowns," "The Fantasticks," "Beyond The Fringe," and "Oh, Dad, Poor Dad." They enjoyed this trip even more than the previous ones and just managed to escape the severe weather.

It is a pleasure to report that during the runs of "Gigi" and "Hansel and Gretel," late arrivals and "no shows" were reduced to a minimum. We discovered that the evening performances of "Hansel and Gretel" were far less popular than the matinees, but the total attendance of 1,200 young people and young in heart is encouraging for a repetition of a children's play at Christmas. We shall be grateful for suggestions of titles in this somewhat limited field.

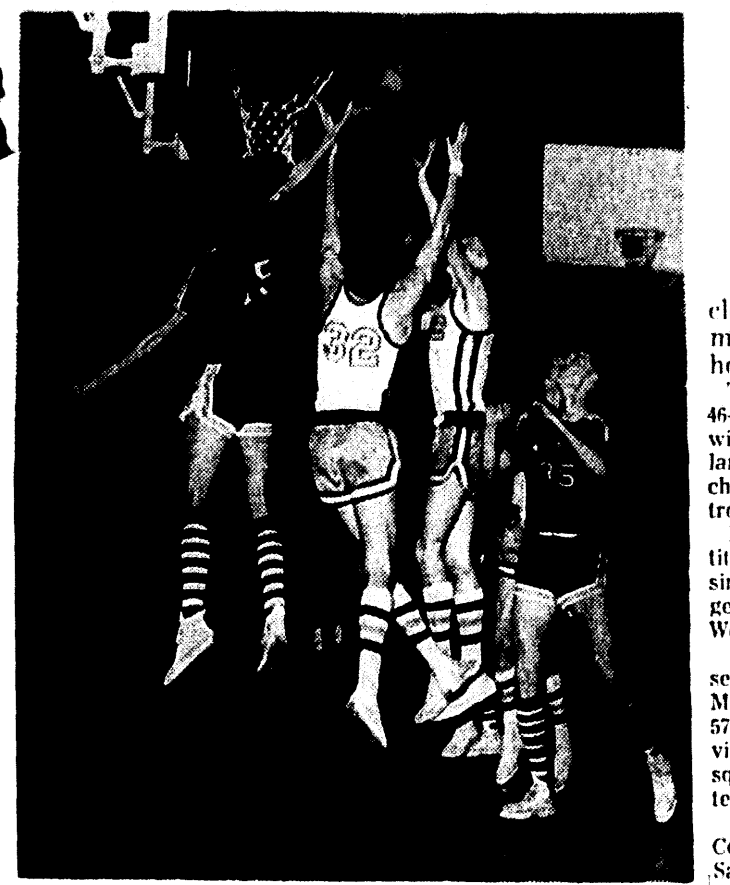
Neville Makes Clean Sweep Of Ouachita's Invitational Tourney



THREE PLAYERS go up for a rebound in the first quarter of Saturday's championship game of the Ouachita Invitational between Ouachita and Neville. Ouachita's Darryl Barnes (15) and Neville's Randell Fallin (32) and Bill Davis scramble for the ball with Lion Dennis Crawley waiting on the floor and Tiger Malcolm Smith behind him. AT MIDWAY MARK

Trio Tied For L.A. Golf Lead

By BOB MYERS

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A trio of tournament-hardened golfers, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, Ed Furgol and Bob Rosburg, wound up in a three-way tie for the lead at the midway mark of the $50,000 Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament Saturday as luck faded for some of the stars.

Harrison, at 52, and Furgol, 45, dubbed the fine old gentlemen of golf, had matching rounds of 69-67 for a 36-hole total of 136.

Rosburg, finishing in the gathering dusk at the Rancho Park Golf Club, entered the charmed circle with a 70, one under par for the 36-35—71 test.

Gene Littler, the first round leader with a 65, spent a bad day scrambling from tee to cup. And when he missed a 2-foot putt on the 18th green, he took a 72 and fell into a four-way tie at 137.

Masters champion Arnold Palmer shot his second straight 69 for 138 where he was tied with Billy Maxwell, Jerry Steelsmith and Art Wall Jr.

Disaster almost struck National Open champion Jack Nicklaus. His round of 74-71 for 145 barely made the cut as the field was cut to the low 75 scorers and ties. The cutoff point was 145.

Girls, Boys Defeat Hosts In Final Tilts

By STUART HILL
World Sports Writer

Neville's girls and boys basketball teams made a clean sweep of Ouachita's annual invitational tournament Saturday night with ironic defeats of both Lion hosting teams in the finals.

The Neville girls beat Ouachita, 46-42 in a crowd raising squeaker with the Tiger boys rolling to larger, 40-31 margin over the Ouachita quintet to take the top trophy.

Neville's victory for the boys title served as a revenge win since Ouachita eliminated the Tigers in the recent News-Star—World tourney's semi - finals.

Ouachita drew a bye into the semi-final action against West Monroe and topped the Rebels, 57-41 in Saturday afternoon. Neville downed a strong Calhoun squad, 42-38 to meet the hosting team in the finals.

In girls play, Neville topped Central of Delhi, 49-39 in the only Saturday girls game to go against the Ouachita sextet in the finals.

Neville landed two players on the boys all - tourney team selected by the officials. Neville's representatives were Malcolm Smith and Bill Davis. Others selected to the five man team include Paul Thompson of Calhoun, David Walker, West Monroe and James Edgar, Ouachita.

The Tigers also paced two on the girls all - tourney sextet, Polly Johnson and Carolyn Courson. Ouachita's Sandra Leavitt and Janet Glenn were also named to the team. Rounding out the girls all - tournament team are Mary Nell Stephens of Bastrop and Joyce McKinzie of Central.

The boys title game turned into a hectic scramble which kept the score down and both teams seeking ball control.

Trophies were awarded to first and second place winners in both divisions with Neville taking first in both brackets and Ouachita taking the second place symbol in each division.

Carolyn Courson was the big gun in Neville's victory, popping in 24- points against the Ouachita lasses. Janet Glenn scored 18 for the Lions.

TITLE GAME

Neville used the services of Davis, Smith, John Garrett and Sam Caverlee to almost dominate backboard play and help the Tigers gain ball control.

Ouachita's little James Edgar broke through Neville's defenses enough to score 12 - points and lead the Lions in scoring. The Tigers put Davis and Smith in the double figures with 10- points each then followed up with Joe Canal and Randell Fallin with five each and Garrett with seven.

The Tigers held the lead at the end of all three quarters, jumped off to a 10-7 lead at the end of the first frame and never allowed the Lions closer than four points the rest of the game.

Neville was on the long end of a 21-12 score at the half and 34-22 margin at the end of the third frame.

Neville built its largest lead of the night early in the fourth when they held the Lions, 40-23 with 6:00 remaining.

Ouachita scored on 11 of 19 free throws with Neville having a better night at the gratis line with 10 of 16 tries.

In Saturday afternoon's semifinal action, Ouachita's boys topped West Monroe, 57-41, in their first outing of the tourney. Neville slipped by Calhoun in a strong defensive game in the second encounter, 42-38. This pitted the two in the finals.

Both semi - final games were marked with defensive standouts. Randell Fallin held Calhoun's James Thompson, the Chieftains leading sophomore scorer to only 12 - points while the Calhoun squad forced Neville to the outside for most of its points.

The tall Chieftains managed a few under-the-goal markers with Thompson and James Futrell but Neville's Joe Canal connected on long jumpers and a few fast breaking lay ups to muster 12-points for the game. Lean Malcolm Smith led the Tigers' scoring with 15 - points while Futrell hit for 16 Calhoun points with Thompson going for 12.

Neville took a hard fought 12-11 lead at the end of the first frame. Canal sunk four field goals and Bill Davis and Smith one each to account for Tiger scoring in the quarter. Thompson and Futrell scored all but two - points for the Chieftains in the first stanza.

Neville's defenses tightened in the second quarter but the Calhoun five came out on top of a 23-22 halftime lead.

Fouls, running penalties and strict man to man defense drew the third frame into more than twice the regulation eight minutes. The score remained tied at 27-27 for more than three minutes in the quarter but Calhoun came through with four free throws by Futrell in the final 1:30 to take a 31-29 lead at the end of the third.

The fourth quarter saw Canal and Fallin foul out for the Tigers and Harry Brown take the bench for Calhoun due to the miscue ruling.

Neville tied the score at 31-31 with only 10 seconds gone in the quarter then pushed ahead never to rail the Chieftains. Calhoun trailed Neville, 38-39 with 2:10 remaining. Smith tallied from directly under the goal after faking out two Calhoun defenders with one minute left then sank a free toss with :20 remaining to ice the victory.

OUACHITA

Ouachita's Lions rallied strongly behind Darryl Barnes in the second half to down West Monroe. The Rebels led Ouachita, 13-11 at the end of the first quarter and Ouachita returned to lead 30-22 at the half.

Edgar kept the Rebels looking at the goal with his fast breaks and lay ups while Barnes continued to hit from the outside.

Ouachita took the largest lead of the game with four minutes remaining in the final frame. Scoring five - points in half as many minutes, the Lions built up to a 50-33 lead causing consternation in the Rebel camp, with good reason.

David Walker turned out high man for the Rebs with 11-points. Dickie Jackson started hitting long field goals late in the game and pumped in three in the final four minutes to help cut Ouachita's winning margin to 57-41.

DOUBLE OVERTIME

Kentucky Five Nipped, 86-85

By KELSO STURGEON

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)— Georgia Tech's powerful Yellow Jackets used two free throws by Mike Tomasovich with 7 seconds left in the second overtime Saturday night to nail down an 86-85 victory over sixth - ranked Kentucky in the Southeastern Conference basketball opener for both schools.

In the final round, sophomore R. D. Carddock of Hardyville, Ky. hit two free throws for Tech to give the Jackets an 84-81 edge. This with Tomasovich's goal offset final shots by Kentucky's Ted Deeken and Charlie Ishmael.

Tech, winning its ninth without a loss, sprinted to a 10-point first half lead but held only a 40-39 advantage at the half.

Jim Caldwell led Tech with 19 points and Tomasovich added 18.

Ishmael scored 22 for Kentucky. The Wildcats' All-America candidate Cotton Nash scored only nine points and sat on the bench much of the way.

Last Half Splurge Sparks Win No. 9

Northeast State got another fine second half effort here Saturday night to turn away Arkansas State, 88-75, and revenge defeat suffered at the hands of the visitors earlier this season.

The Tribe was beaten 67-60, by Arkansas State only two games ago in Jonesboro, Ark. but were not to be denied Saturday as they fired in a fine 50.7 percent of their shots to claim the victory.

The victory for Coach Lenny Fant's cagers gives them a 9-4 mark for the entire campaign. The Indians get back to conference play here Tuesday night when they host neighboring Louisiana Tech. At present Northeast has a 1-0 GSC mark after shipping Northwestern and Tech stands 0-1 after bowing to Southwestern.

Although Northeast hit 45.4 percent in the first half, it held only a meager one - point lead, 33-32, beginning second half action.

As if to say, "If that's not good enough we'll do better." Northeast sprinted away quickly in the second half, behind the shooting of Milton Linder and Stuart Toms, and poked in a blazing 56.2 percent of its shots to win going away.

Linder, who finished the night with 18 points, scored 12 points in a spand of only six minutes early in the final half to lead the Indians' surge. Toms got eight of his final 15 points quickly in the second half and after the twosome finally slowed down their scoring pace, Northeast had advanced from a one point lead to one of 13 points, 54-41.

At this point, Arkansas State, who had proven in the opening half that it did not quit so easily, began rallying and for a few moments it looked as if the second half would be a carbon copy of the first.

In the initial half, Northeast tried to make a run - away of things by racing to an eleven point lead, 20-9, with 12:02 still remaining.

Northeast had taken this bulging lead on some fine outside shooting of Jerry Salley. The sophomore guard netted eight straight points for the Tribe, six of them coming on jump shots from beyond the top of the free throw circle.

The visitors cut the lead to seven points, 22-15, with 10:42 remaining when Jerry Rook scored on a jumper. Linder then hit a set with 9:50 left to put Northeast ahead by nine.

Jimmy Walker drilled in a hook shot from near the free throw line with 7:58 left and Northeast led, 26-18. Irby Gamble, who had been in only second, found the range from the side and his shot gave the Tribe a 30-20 lead with only 4:47 remaining in the half.

Everything looked like peaches and cream for Northeast at this point but just as suddenly as the point-spread appeared, it then disappeared.

Rook and Harold Callahan led a State rally with their shooting and rebounding. In the remaining minutes Rook scored six tallies and Callhan four. Then with only 57 second to go Jerry Hudgins hit two free tosses and the visitors had their only lead of the night, 32-31.

In the second half, after Linder, Toms & Company had gotten back a fairly comfortable lead the visitors made one last desperate try for recovery as they cut the margin to five points, 59-54.

But the Tribe would not sit still and with Walker and reserve center Larry Butler at the helm, Northeast again surged away. This time it was for keeps as Northeast claimed a commanding 19 point lead with 4:15 left.

During the scoring parade Walker got nine points and Butler chipped in five.

In the final three minutes Arkansas cut the margin down to 10 points once, 80-70, but could get no closer.

Don Shatley connected on two three - point plays for the visitors and also hit three other free throw in the last minutes to keep fading hopes alive somewhat longer.

Walker again led Northeast with 21 points and he also picked off 15 rebounds. Big Robert Cook added 11 rebounds to the cause before leaving the contest midway in the last half due to foul trouble.

Rook netted 26 points to lead all scorers although he hit only nine of 26 shots from the field.

One of the most brilliant phases of the entire contest was both teams' accuracy at the free throw line. The visitors hit 23 of 25 gratis tosses and Northeast connected on 22 of 28.

South Passers Post 33-27 Win

By VERNON BUTLER

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—A pair of Rebel rifles named Glynn Griffing and Gary Cuozzo found ready receivers Saturday in Billy Gambrell and Johnny Baker and passed the South to a 33-27 triumph over the North in the 14th Senior Bowl football game.

The 6-foot-1 quarterbacks, Griffing of Mississippi and Cuozzo of Virginia, hurled the South to a 33-6 lead in the third quarter. But Jerry Gross — smashing Senior Bowl passing records along the way—led the North in a pulsating rally that kept the crowd of 38,048 fans in an uproar for the final segment of the nationally televised contest.

Griffing and Gross threw three touchdown passes each. Cuozzo hurled one and the furiously struggled combatants tallied one apiece on the ground in posting 60 points for a Senior Bowl scoring record.

The South's big lead melted in the heat of Gross' sizzling passing with the Rebels forced to seal their victory in a tremendous goal-line stand in the final minute.

A massive Southern midsection, led by Alabama's Lee Roy Jordan, Mississippi's Jim Dunaway and LSU's Fred Miller, stopped Dave Hoppmann of Iowa State, Dave Katterhenrich of Ohio State and Gross inside the Rebel 2 as the last seconds ticked away.

Gross, a quarterback from Detroit bypassed to date by the professional leagues, completed 24 passes for 317 yards, both Senior Bowl standards. Dick Norman of Stanford completed 20 for 311 yards in the 1961 game. Gross was named the outstanding back for the North in a poll of writers.

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—Statistics of the North-South Senior Bowl football game:

Heart Disease Claims 'Rajah'

By JERRY LISKA

CHICAGO (AP)—Rogers Hornsby, baseball's Rajah of Swat, a classic player and controversial manager, died Saturday of complications resulting from a heart condition. He was 66.

Considered the game's greatest righthanded pitcher, Hornsby was a member of the Baseball Hall of Fame. He won the National League batting championship seven years and was holder of the highest 20th Century major league batting average, .424 in 1924.

He had entered Wesley Memorial Hospital for eye surgery Dec. 9.

He died in the hospital at 10:05 a.m. with his third wife and a stepdaughter at his side.

After undergoing a cataract operation Dec. 10, Hornsby suffered a small stroke Dec. 14. His condition was reported improving until Friday night when he suddenly suffered a lung complication.

Pending completion of an autopsy, death was attributed to a heart condition known as myocardial infarction in which the blood supply to heart muscles is blocked off and the muscles die.

The blunt-spoken Hornsby, as a brilliant second baseman and playing manager, led the 1926 St. Louis Cardinals to their first pennant and a World Series conquest of the New York Yankees.

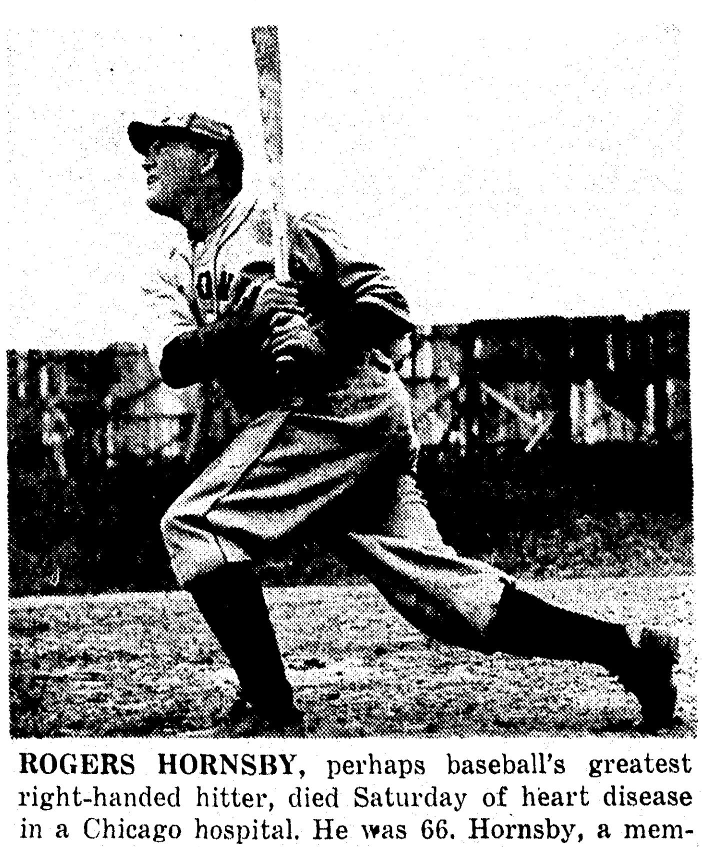
He also managed the Boston Braves, the Chicago Cubs, St. Louis Browns (twice) and Cincinnati Reds, His frankness and rugged individualism contributed to his dismissal five times as a big league manager, the last time by the Reds Sept. 17, 1953.

Last year, he served as a coach and player scout for the New York Mets in their first National League season.

A perfectionist on the playing field, or on baseball matters generally, Hornsby had a sharp tongue. In Chicago press boxes where he spent considerable time in recent years he was waggishly tagged "Sweet Talk Rog."

He had lived in Chicago since leaving Cincinnati, serving as a Cub batting coach and on Mayor Richard Daley's Chicago Youth Commission, directing an instruction program for boys. Then came his chance to evaluate talent, one of his best likes, for the newly organized Mets.

When Hornsby, ruggedly-built with piercing eyes, entered the hospital, he did it—he said jokingly—as "an entry" with another former big league star, Ted Lyons. They arrived together and had opposite rooms to await the same operation, removal of cataracts,



ROGERS HORNSBY, perhaps baseball's greatest right-handed hitter, died Saturday of heart disease in a Chicago hospital. He was 66. Neville Makes Clean Sweep Of Ouachita's Invitational Tourney

THREE PLAYERS go up for a rebound in the first quarter of Saturday's championship game of the Ouachita Invitational between Ouachita and Neville. Ouachita's Darryl Barnes (15) and Neville's Randell Fallin (32) and Bill Davis scramble for the ball with Lion Dennis Crawley waiting on the floor and Tiger Malcolm Smith behind him. Girls, Boys Defeat Hosts In Final Tilts

By STUART HILL
World Sports Writer

Neville's girls and boys basketball teams made a clean sweep of Ouachita's annual invitational tournament Saturday night with ironic defeats of both Lion hosting teams in the finals.

The Neville girls beat Ouachita, 46-42 in a crowd raising squeaker with the Tiger boys rolling to larger, 40-31 margin over the Ouachita quintet to take the top trophy.

Neville's victory for the boys title served as a revenge win since Ouachita eliminated the Tigers in the recent News-Star—World tourney's semi - finals.

Ouachita drew a bye into the semi-final action against West Monroe and topped the Rebels, 57-41 in Saturday afternoon. Neville downed a strong Calhoun squad, 42-38 to meet the hosting team in the finals.

In girls play, Neville topped Central of Delhi, 49-39 in the only Saturday girls game to go against the Ouachita sextet in the finals.

Neville landed two players on the boys all - tourney team selected by the officials. Neville's representatives were Malcolm Smith and Bill Davis. Others selected to the five man team include Paul Thompson of Calhoun, David Walker, West Monroe and James Edgar, Ouachita.

The Tigers also paced two on the girls all - tourney sextet, Polly Johnson and Carolyn Courson. Ouachita's Sandra Leavitt and Janet Glenn were also named to the team. Rounding out the girls all - tournament team are Mary Nell Stephens of Bastrop and Joyce McKinzie of Central.

The boys title game turned into a hectic scramble which kept the score down and both teams seeking ball control.

Trophies were awarded to first and second place winners in both divisions with Neville taking first in both brackets and Ouachita taking the second place symbol in each division.

Carolyn Courson was the big gun in Neville's victory, popping in 24- points against the Ouachita lasses. Janet Glenn scored 18 for the Lions.

TITLE GAME

Neville used the services of Davis, Smith, John Garrett and Sam Caverlee to almost dominate backboard play and help the Tigers gain ball control.

Ouachita's little James Edgar broke through Neville's defenses enough to score 12 - points and lead the Lions in scoring. The Tigers put Davis and Smith in the double figures with 10- points each then followed up with Joe Canal and Randell Fallin with five each and Garrett with seven.

The Tigers held the lead at the end of all three quarters, jumped off to a 10-7 lead at the end of the first frame and never allowed the Lions closer than four points the rest of the game.

Neville was on the long end of a 21-12 score at the half and 34-22 margin at the end of the third frame.

Neville built its largest lead of the night early in the fourth when they held the Lions, 40-23 with 6:00 remaining.

Ouachita scored on 11 of 19 free throws with Neville having a better night at the gratis line with 10 of 16 tries.

In Saturday afternoon's semi-final action, Ouachita's boys topped West Monroe, 57-41, in their first outing of the tourney. Neville slipped by Calhoun in a strong defensive game in the second encounter, 42-38. This pitted the two in the finals.

Both semi - final games were marked with defensive standouts, Randell Fallin held Calhoun's James Thompson, the Chieftains leading sophomore scorer to only 12 - points while the Calhoun squad forced Neville to the outside for most of its points.

The tall Chieftains managed a few under-the-goal markers with Thompson and James Futrell but Neville's Joe Canal connected on long jumpers and a few fast breaking lay ups to muster 12-points for the game. Lean Malcolm Smith led the Tigers' scoring with 15 - points while Futrell hit for 16 Calhoun points with Thompson going for 12.

Neville took a hard fought 12-11 lead at the end of the first frame. Canal sunk four field goals and Bill Davis and Smith one each to account for Tiger scoring in the quarter. Thompson and Futrell scored all but two - points for the Chieftains in the first stanza.

Neville's defenses tightened in the second quarter but the Calhoun five came out on top of a 23-22 halftime lead.

Fouls, running penalties and strict man to man defense drew the third frame into more than twice the regulation eight minutes. The score remained tied at 27-27 for more than three minutes in the quarter but Calhoun came through with four free throws by Futrell in the final 1:30 to take a 31-29 lead at the end of the third.

The fourth quarter saw Canal and Fallin foul out for the Tigers and Harry Brown take the bench for Calhoun due to the miscue ruling.

Neville tied the score at 31-31 with only 10 seconds gone in the quarter then pushed ahead never to rail the Chieftains. Calhoun trailed Neville, 38-39 with 2:10 remaining. Smith tallied from directly under the goal after faking out two Calhoun defenders with one minute left then sank a free toss with :20 remaining to ice the victory.

OUACHITA

Ouachita's Lions rallied strongly behind Darryl Barnes in the second half to down West Monroe. The Rebels led Ouachita, 13-11 at the end of the first quarter and Ouachita returned to lead 30-22 at the half.

Three Lions landed in the double figures to take the win with James Edgar hitting 18, Dennis Crawley sinking 15 from his center spot and Barnes leading the Lions pack with 20 - points for the afternoon.

Edgar kept the Rebels looking at the goal with his fast breaks and lay ups while Barnes continued to hit from the outside.

Ouachita took the largest lead of the game with four minutes remaining in the final frame. Scoring five - points in half as many minutes, the Lions built up to a 50-33 lead causing consternation in the Rebel camp, with good reason.

David Walker turned out high man for the Rebs with 11-points. Dickie Jackson started hitting long field goals late in the game and pumped in three in the final four minutes to help cut Ouachita's winning margin to 57-41.

Last Half Splurge Sparks Win No. 9

By KEITH PRINCE
World Sports Writer

Northeast State got another fine second half effort here Saturday night to turn away Arkansas State, 88-75, and revenge defeat suffered at the hands of the visitors earlier this season.

The Tribe was beaten 67-60, by Arkansas State only two games ago in Jonesboro, Ark. but were not to be denied Saturday as they fired in a fine 50.7 percent of their shots to claim the victory.

The victory for Coach Lenny Fant's cagers gives them a 9-4 mark for the entire campaign. The Indians get back to conference play here Tuesday night when they host neighboring Louisiana Tech. At present Northeast has a 1-0 GSC mark after shipping Northwestern and Tech stands 0-1 after bowing to Southwestern.

Although Northeast hit 45.4 percent in the first half, it held only a meager one - point lead, 33-32, bginning second half action.

As if to say, "If that's not good enough we'll do better," Northeast sprinted away quickly in the second half, behind the shooting of Milton Linder and Stuart Toms, and poked in a blazing 56.2 percent of its shots to win going away.

Linder, who finished the night with 18 points, scored 12 points in a spand of only six minutes early in the final half to lead the Indians' surge. Toms got eight of his final 15 points quickly in the second half and after the twosome finally slowed down their scoring pace, Northeast had advanced from a one point lead to one of 13 points, 54-41.

At this point, Arkansas State, who had proven in the opening half that it did not quit so easily, began rallying and for a few moments it looked as if the second half would be a carbon copy of the first.

In the initial half, Northeast tried to make a run - away of things by racing to an eleven point lead, 20-9, with 12:02 still remaining.

Northeast had taken this bulging lead on some fine outside shooting of Jerry Salley. The sophomore guard netted eight straight points for the Tribe, six of them coming on jump shots from beyond the top of the free throw circle.

The visitors cut the lead to seven points, 22-15, with 10:42 remaining when Jerry Rook scored on a jumper. Linder then hit a set with 9:50 left to put Northeast ahead by nine.

Jimmy Walker drilled in a hook shot from near the free throw line with 7:58 left and Northeast led, 26-18. Irby Gamble, who had been in only second, found the range from the side and his shot gave the Tribe a 30-20 lead with only 4:47 remaining in the half.

Everything looked like peaches and cream for Northeast at this point but just as suddenly as the point-spread appeared, it then disappeared.

Rook and Harold Callahan led a State rally with their shooting and rebounding. In the remaining minutes Rook scored six tallies and Callhan four. Then with only 57 second to go Jerry Hudgins hit two free tosses and the visitors had their only lead of the night, 32-31.

In the second half, after Linder, Toms & Company had gotten back a fairly comfortable lead the visitors made one last desperate try for recovery as they cut the margin to five points, 59-54.

But the Tribe would not sit still and with Walker and reserve center Larry Butler at the helm, Northeast again surged away. This time it was for keeps as Northeast claimed a commanding 19 point lead with 4:15 left.

During the scoring parade Walker got nine points and Butler chipped in five.

In the final three minutes Arkansas cut the margin down to 10 points once, 80-70, but could get no closer.

Don Shatley connected on two three - point plays for the visitors and also hit three other free throw in the last minutes to keep fading hopes alive somewhat longer.

Walker again led Northeast with 21 points and he also picked off 15 rebounds. Big Robert Cook added 11 rebounds to the cause before leaving the contest midway in the last half due to foul trouble.

Rook netted 26 points to lead all scorers although he hit only nine of 26 shots from the field.

One of the most brilliant phases of the entire contest was both teams' accuracy at the free throw line. The visitors hit 23 of 25 gratis tosses and Northeast connected on 22 of 28.

AT MIDWAY MARK

By BOB MYERS

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A trio of tournament-hardened golfers, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, Ed Furgol and Bob Rosburg, wound up in a three-way tie for the lead at the midway mark of the $50,000 Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament Saturday as luck faded for some of the stars.

Harrison, at 52, and Furgol, 45, dubbed the fine old gentlemen of golf, had matching rounds of 69-67 for a 36-hole total of 136.

Rosburg, finishing in the gathering dusk at the Rancho Park Golf Club, entered the charmed circle with a 70, one under par for the 36-35—71 test.

Gene Littler, the first round leader with a 65, spent a bad day scrambling from tee to cup. And when he missed a 2-foot putt on the 18th green, he took a 72 and fell into a four-way tie at 137.

Masters champion Arnold Palmer shot his second straight 69 for 138 where he was tied with Billy Maxwell, Jerry Steelsmith and Art Wall Jr.

Disaster almost struck National Open champion Jack Nicklaus. His round of 74-71 for 145 barely made the cut as the field was cut to the low 75 scorers and ties. The cutoff point was 145.

DOUBLE OVERTIME

Kentucky Five Nipped, 86-85

By KELSO STURGEON

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)— Georgia Tech's powerful Yellow Jackets used two free throws by Mike Tomasovich with 7 seconds left in the second overtime Saturday night to nail down an 86-85 victory over sixth - ranked Kentucky in the Southeastern Conference basketball opener for both schools.

In the final round, sophomore R. D. Carddock of Hardyville, Ky. hit two free throws for Tech to give the Jackets an 84-81 edge. This with Tomasovich's goal offset final shots by Kentucky's Ted Deeken and Charlie Ishmael.

Tech, winning its ninth without a loss, sprinted to a 10-point first half lead but held only a 40-39 advantage at the half.

Jim Caldwell led Tech with 19 points and Tomasovich added 18.

Ishmael scored 22 for Kentucky. The Wildcats' All-America candidate Cotton Nash scored only nine points and sat on the bench much of the way.

South Passers Post 33-27 Win

By VERNON BUTLER

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—A pair of Rebel rifles named Glynn Griffing and Gary Cuozzo found ready receivers Saturday in Billy Gambrell and Johnny Baker and passed the South to a 33-27 triumph over the North in the 14th Senior Bowl football game.

The 6-foot-1 quarterbacks, Griffing of Mississippi and Cuozzo of Virginia, hurled the South to a 33-6 lead in the third quarter. But Jerry Gross — smashing Senior Bowl passing records along the way—led the North in a pulsating rally that kept the crowd of 38,048 fans in an uproar for the final segment of the nationally televised contest.

Griffing and Gross threw three touchdown passes each. Cuozzo hurled one and the furiously struggled combatants tallied one apiece on the ground in posting 60 points for a Senior Bowl scoring record.

The South's big lead melted in the heat of Gross' sizzling passing with the Rebels forced to seal their victory in a tremendous goal-line stand in the final minute.

A massive Southern midsection, led by Alabama's Lee Roy Jordan, Mississippi's Jim Dunaway and LSU's Fred Miller, stopped Dave Hoppmann of Iowa State, Dave Katterhenrich of Ohio State and Gross inside the Rebel 2 as the last seconds ticked away.

Gross, a quarterback from Detroit bypassed to date by the professional leagues, completed 24 passes for 317 yards, both Senior Bowl standards. Dick Norman of Stanford completed 20 for 311 yards in the 1961 game. Gross was named the outstanding back for the North in a poll of writers.

Delta Deer Sadly Decline

With Sam Hanna

Future Will Tell

Louisiana's deer season is fast approaching an end, but it won't come any too soon for hunters in Northeast Louisiana who are disappointed with this year's whitetail sport.

After the season ends Thursday, it should take the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission several weeks to compile a tabulation of the total kill along with reports that will reflect the condition of our deer herd.

But we fear that the reports for the Delta of Northeast Louisiana — too - long looked to as the deer hunting paradise of Louisiana — will reflect a deer herd on the decline.

Hunters who have watched the season in Tensas and Madison have seen in general a lesser grade of deer killed although there have been some fine bucks killed over there.

But on the over - all scale deer killed in Tensas and Madison this season were smaller than those killed in previous years. Bucks weren't as big and certainly their racks have been something short of trophy-status.

Most of the bucks killed, we guess, have been spikes.

The reports haven't been released yet, but according to Joe L. Herring, chief of the fish and game division, deer killed on the Chicago Mill Game Management Area were [illegible] pounds smaller this season.

A number of reasons are given for this decline by the biologists, but probably the biggest factor in the decline of the herd is the weather that Louisiana has undergone these past several months.

To begin with the freeze last January practically wiped out the mast. Acorns are the deer's favorite. Then along came a long period of dry weather and again the mast crop was given a set-back.

On top of this, some areas of the Delta have had a big concentration of deer for sometime — too big perhaps to cope with the conditions of the habitat.

And there is the belief among biologists that the killing of the best deer — such as the big racked bucks — leads to the gradual decline of the herd. Deer of a smaller stature are prone to reproduce a smaller deer — just as people do.

For these reasons and because of agricultural damage by deer, an "any" deer season was conducted in Tensas during the second half of the season. A great majority of deer killed were antlerless.

Whether the "any" deer season will help upgrade the deer herd remains to be seen, but other states have been killing antlerless deer for several years and Louisiana is certainly not at the top of the list in the deer hunting states.

Louisiana still has hunters who refuse to shoot antlerless deer including us. But it is logical to believe that a balanced deer herd will make for a healthy deer herd.

And a balanced herd can be reached by only one way, according to the biologists and that is by the "any" deer season. Trapping can't do the job.

While the Delta deer herd declines, it becomes evident that the trend in Louisiana deer hunting will shift to the hill country. Deer herds are building up around Monroe now — in the hills of rural Ouachita, Lincoln, Union, Jackson, and in the border swamplands of Caldwell, Richland and Morehouse.

More land is being cleared in the Delta as each year rolls by and there is reason to believe that Tensas Swamp, owned by the lumber interests, will be cleared someday.

If this happens, you can kiss the Delta good-bye as far as its deer herd is concerned.

Deer hunters, meantime, should prepare next year not to overlook the offerings of the woods closer to home. The best bucks killed this year were in Lafourche Swamp just outside Monroe where the mast was better and where the bucks had a chance to grow a rack.

Bucks At Home

Only disappointing part of the deer season on the Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area near Monroe in Lafourche Swamp was the small number of hunters.

Because Russell Sage produced a handsome deer kill —handsome in that the bucks were good deer.

Supervisor Jack Rushing counted about 25 bucks killed on Russell Sage during the brief split season. And the smallest buck was a 5-pointer. Most of them had 6-point and 8-point racks.

One was a [illegible]-point buck that dressed out over 200 pounds. In fact, Jack said several of the bucks dressed out at over 200 pounds. All were in good shape with excellent antler development.

Sportsmen who hunted Russell Sage report ideal woods conditions for a deer herd, in addition to seeing much deer sign, plus a great deal of buck sign.

The irony of it all is that most local deer hunters drove past the best buck country in the area to get to the Delta where few good bucks have been killed.

Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area — composed of 14,000 acres purchased by the state — is the place to watch in the future. Try it next year.

Incidentally, the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission is considering releasing turkeys in the Lafourche area. There are several high ridges in the swamp that are just right for turkeys.

Russell Sage will produce if the public support it.

Mississippi Kill

Mississippi's total deer kill for the November season will total more than 8,000, according to information from the game department of the Magnolia State.

More than 1,000 anterless deer were killed.

You'll recall last week that we reported the Arkansas kill in November was 15,585, including "any" deer.

In Mississippi, the leading deer county was Bolivar with 752 bucks. But the 1962 November deer kill in Mississippi was 1,200 more than in 1961.

One thing we noticed in the Mississippi report. Hunters there didn't kill as many deer on the management areas as Louisiana hunters did here.

The management area total was 786 for Mississippi and 1,352 for Louisiana.

Little Man's Corner

Post - holiday hunts continued and the little men made news afield.

While most attention was directed at deer hunting, the fishermen got into the news, especially at Sterlington where Helen Wimberly landed what she believes to be a walleyed pike.

Pike come from Arkansas, but seldom get into Louisiana waters because the streams here are too muddy. Biologist Jim Davis says more than likely the fish was a sauger, which resembles the pike.

White perch fishing is good in several spots — like Clear Lake, Lafourche and Concordia. Averett Douglas landed a nice string of bream in the Blue Hole at Lake St. John. Will Gunner had good luck with the white perch there.

Bass fishing has been good at Cheniere, Black Bayou and Bayou DeSiard. Try the Yellow H&H or the Mud Puppy.

And the bear season ended after five days of hunting with only one kill reported — by Ralph Holloway of Holly Ridge. He got his bear in East Carroll.

On the deer hunting scene, two Monroe sports, George Stamper and Walter Duckett, killed their two - buck limit in Madison Parish. They reported that most of the bucks killed in their neck of the woods left little to boast about.

From Rayville, two Crawford boys — Wilson Crawford and his cousin — got their two - buck limits on Russell Sage. Wilson killed a 6-point and an 8-point while his cousin killed two 8-pointers, including one that field dressed at over 200 pounds.

Meantime, Lake Providence deer hunters have had some good hunts on Henderson Island Newman Towhead where over 80 bucks have been killed.

And the bird hunters are sounding off in the Lake Providence area. Bill Shirey and Frank Edmondson got eight on a hunt while Shirey and his two sons, Mike and Billy, killed 16 on another hunt.

Marvin Ragland says he's found lots of birds, but can't hit the target. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Foutz had a good trip bass fishing and white perch fishing in Lake Concordia.

15-1 Shot Bigger Bonus Wins New Orleans Race

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Bigger Bonus, a 15-1 shot, grabbed the lead at the far turn and went on to an easy victory in the $20,000 Old Hickory Handicap Saturday at the Fair Grounds.

Jockey Richard Young had hustled Bigger Bonus into the third spot behind front-running Phoenix Bird and Salason, the W. Hal Bishop entry. Then Bigger Bonus moved up to pass Phoenix Bird and take the lead at the three eighths pole and won by six lengths.

Phoenix Bird lasted to take second while Garganey moved up from fourth to take the show spot.

Bigger Bonus, owned by L. J. Knight, paid $33.80, $10.80 and $6.80. Phoenix Bird paid $5.60, $4.40 while Garganey returned $4.80 to show.

DEER HUNTING in the Lake St. John area paid off for Everett Bamburg (right) of Ferriday, who killed these 8-point and 10-point bucks. Dr. Harry Olmstead of Monroe was on the hunt with Bamburg. And on the same hunt, in the second photograph, Scotter Browning and Keith Boyekin got their first bucks that were admired by small frys Mike Browning, Davis Bamburg and Mimi Bamburg.

Bulldog Hurler Leads Nationals

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP)— Charley Furlow of Mississippi State passed for two touchdowns and Bill "Thunder" Thornton of Nebraska ran for two Saturday as the National All Stars whipped the Southwest All-Stars 33-13 in the first Southwest Challenge Bowl football game.

Furlow, who completed 20 of 33 passes for 261 yards, was voted outstanding back.

The Southwest took the lead under the passing and running of Johnny Genung of Texas in the second period. But after that it was a case of the Southwest boys fighting for their lives as Furlow unlimbered his passing arm and Louis Guy of Mississippi, Dick Williamson of Alabama, and Bobby Santiago of New Mexico became his favorite targets.

Williamson wound up as the outstanding lineman.

Furlow threw 35 yards to Guy for one touchdown and 33 to Williamson for another. The third touchdown was handed to the Nationals when Johnny Lovelace of Texas Tech was jarred loose from the ball. Don Dickson of Mississippi and Jim Moss of South Carolina chased the ball 18 yards across the goal line for a touchdown.

The three National touchdowns all came within a period of two minutes.

There was no scoring in the third period but in the fourth the Nationals surged 84 yards to a touchdown with a 50-yard pass from Furlow to Williamson setting it up. Thornton made it with a 6-yard burst.

Abendroth Scores 39; Canines Defeat Gents

RUSTON (Special)—Junior forward Joe Abendroth from Shreveport poured in 39 points here Saturday night to give Louisiana Tech a 73-65 overtime win over Centenary College.

Regular time ended with the two teams in a 61-61 deadlock, but the Techsters ran off from the Gents in the extra period.

Centenary had trampled Tech 79-61 in a Gulf South Classic tilt in December.

Besides Abendroth, Jerry Hood was the only other Bulldog in double figures with 14. Centenary had a balanced attack with five players in double figures.

Jimmy Williams led the Gents with 16 points, while Stan McAfoos had 15 and Cecil Upshaw, Riley Wallace and Williard Moore 10 each.

Centenary jumped off to 7-0 lead and lead 32-29 at intermission.

After the first 10 minutes the Gents had a 20-10 lead which Tech chopped down to three by halftime.

Tech got the lead for the first time on an Abendroth jumper two and a half minutes into the second half. Thereafter it was a nip and tuck affair with the lead changing hands 13 times and the score being knotted eight times.

Both teams missed chances to win the contest in the final seconds of regular time.

Abendroth, who hit 14 fielders and 11 of 18 free throws, got two baskets in the overtime. Hood gave Tech a 63-31 lead on a jumper, but Don Ensley hit from outside to tie it again.

Two successful three throws each by Ron McNabb, David Hruska and Butch Miller moved Tech to a 69-63 margin. Abendroth got a two pointer and Williams connected on one for the Gents. Abendroth added another fielder just befre the final horn.

The teams wound up even on field goals with 26 each, but Tech hit 21 of 32 from the charity line while Centenary converted 13 of 15.

Tech, which travels to Monroe to battle Gulf States Conference champion Northeast State Tuesday night, has a 6-4 record. The Indians are 9-4 for the year and heavy favorites to retain their crown. Tech is 0-1 in league play, Northeast 1-0.

Franks Sparks Texas By Hogs In Last Minutes

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP)— Texas hit 9 of 10 free throws in the last five minutes of play Saturday night while holding Arkansas scoreless during the period to hand the Razorbacks a 69-63 basketball defeat.

Sophomore Larry Franks was fouled four times during the last minutes and hit 7 of 8 charity tosses. Texas had gone into a stall and forced the Hogs to press from the mid-court.

The loss gave Arkansas a 1-1 Southwest Conference record and sent Texas to the fore with a 2-0 card. Both teams are 6-5 for the season.

The Razorbacks jumped to an early 4-0 lead on shots by Jim Wilson and Larry Wofford and maintained it through the first six minutes of the game.

Joe Fisher tied it 8-8 with 11 left and the lead see-sawed through most of the remainder of the first period.

With 6:45 remaining in the half, Jimmy Puryear, a Texas junior who had 11 points in his 10 games played this season, began hitting and had 9 points when the teams left the floor at the mid-point.

Texas clung to their lead in the second period, letting Arkansas get no closer than two points.

Mustangs Upset By Baylor Five

WACO (AP)—Baylor sophomore Winston Moore poured in 25 points Saturday night to lead the Bears to a 62-58 Southwest Conference basketball victory over Southern Methodist.

The Bears, posting their first conference triumph after bowing in an opener Thursday to Texas A&M 80-54, fought off a desperate last minute scoring surge by the Mustangs after holding commanding leaders throughout the game.

Defensive Aide Harland Svare To Head Rams

Svare took over for Bob Waterfield after Waterfield resigned in mid-season last year and coached the luckless Rams in the last six football games. Under his leadership, the Rams, plagued by injuries, had a record of five losses and one tie.

Their final game of the season was a 20-17 loss to the league champion Green Bay Packers.

The Rams' head office said the final game, although a heartbreaking effort, was the team's best game of the season against the formidable Packers.

Svare, who was signed on as a defensive coach at the start of last season, was a star linebacker for the Rams and the New York Giants of the NFL's Eastern Division. He was a lineman at Washington State before joining the NFL.

WIN 73-65 IN OVERTIME

Abendroth Scores 39; Canines Defeat Gents

RUSTON (Special)—Junior forward Joe Abendroth from Shreveport poured in 39 points here Saturday night to give Louisiana Tech a 73-65 overtime win over Centenary College.

Regular time ended with the two teams in a 61-61 deadlock, but the Techsters ran off from the Gents in the extra period.

Centenary had trambled Tech 79-61 in a Gulf South Classic tilt in December.

Besides Abendroth, Jerry Hood was the only other Bulldog in double figures with 14. Centenary had a balanced attack with five players in double figures.

Jimmy Williams led the Gents with 16 points, while Stan McAfoos had 15, and Cecil Upshaw, Riley Wallace and Williard Moore 10 each.

Centenary jumped off to 7-0 lead and lead 32-29 at intermission.

After the first 10 minutes the Gents had a 20-10 lead which Tech chopped down to three by halftime.

Tech got the lead for the first time on an Abendroth jumper two and a half minutes into the second half. Thereafter it was a nip and tuck affair with the lead changing hands 13 times and the score being knotted eight times.

Both teams missed chances to win the contest in the final seconds of regular time.

Abendroth, who hit 14 fielders and 11 of 18 free throws, got two baskets in the overtime. Hood gave Tech a 63-31 lead on a jumper, but Don Ensley hit from outside to tie it again.

Two successful three throws each by Ron McNabb, David Hruska and Butch Miller moved Tech to a 69-63 margin. Abendroth got a two pointer and Williams connected on one for the Gents. Abendroth added another fielder just befre the final horn.

The teams wound up even on field goals with 26 each, but Tech hit 21 of 32 from the charity line while Centenary converted 13 of 15.

Tech, which travels to Monroe to battle Gulf States Conference champion Northeast State Tuesday night, has a 6-4 record. The Indians are 9-4 for the year and heavy favorites to retain their crown. Tech is 0-1 in league play, Northeast 1-0.

Franks Sparks Texas By Hogs In Last Minutes

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP)—Texas hit 9 of 10 free throws in the last five minutes of play Saturday night while holding Arkansas scoreless during the period to hand the Razorbacks a 69-63 basketball defeat.

Sophomore Larry Franks was fouled four times during the last minutes and hit 7 of 8 charity tosses. Texas had gone into a stall and forced the Hogs to press from the mid-court.

The loss gave Arkansas a 1-1 Southwest Conference record and sent Texas to the fore with a 2-0 card. Both teams are 6-5 for the season.

The Razorbacks jumped to an early 4-0 lead on shots by Jim Wilson and Larry Wofford and maintained it through the first six minutes of the game.

Joe Fisher tied it 8-8 with 14 left and the lead see-sawed through most of the remainder of the first period.

With 6:45 remaining in the half, Jimmy Puryear, a Texas junior who had 11 points in his 10 games played this season, began hitting and had 9 points when the teams left the floor at the mid-point.

Texas clung to their lead in the second period, letting Arkansas get no closer than two points.

Mustangs Upset By Baylor Five

WACO (AP)—Baylor sophomore Winston Moore poured in 25 points Saturday night to lead the Bears to a 62-58 Southwest Conference basketball victory over Southern Methodist.

The Bears, posting their first conference triumph after bowing in an opener Thursday to Texas A&M 80-54, fought off a desperate last minute scoring surge by the Mustangs after holding commanding leaders throughout the game.

Defensive Aide Harland Svare To Head Rams

Svare took over for Bob Waterfield after Waterfield resigned in mid-season last year and coached the luckless Rams in the last six football games. Under his leadership, the Rams, plagued by injuries, had a record of five losses and one tie.

Their final game of the season was a 20-17 loss to the league champion Green Bay Packers.

The Rams' head office said the final game, although a heartbreaking effort, was the team's best game of the season against the formidable Packers.

Svare, who was signed on as a defensive coach at the start of last season, was a star linebacker for the Rams and the New York Giants of the NFL's Eastern Division. He was a lineman at Washington State before joining the NFL.

PLUS SUGAR BOWL CROWN

Walker Finishes 1962 With Unbeaten Record

Randall Walker's record-breaking victory in the Sugar Bowl quarter-mile Dec. 31 ended a brilliant year for the Northeast Louisiana speedster.

Walker, a lean senior from Hallsville, Tex., was undefeated in the quarter during 1962, winning seven straight races and notching three records. His last win, in the Sugar Bowl, was his biggest and probably his most satisfying.

The Northeast runner was virtually ignored in pre-meet speculation in favor of defending champion Charles Strong of Oklahoma State, one of the nation's finest trackmen, Gary Richards of Iowa and Larry Albertson of Houston.

Strong, who won the Big Eight Conference 440 title and recorded the fifth best quarter time in the nation last year, 46.3, watched Walker set a blazing pace the first 220, then made a determined bid over the last half of the race. He didn't come close. Walker breezed home the winner by a good 10 yards.

RANDALL WALKER'S victory in the Sugar Bowl 440-yard dash Dec. 31 concluded a brilliant year for the Northeast State runner. Walker was unbeaten in the 440 during 1962 and set records in the quarter-mile in the Shreveport Relays, Gulf States Conference meet and the Sugar Bowl.

Walker's Sugar time of 47.8 broke a nine-year record of 47.0 set by Kansas State's Thane Baker back in 1953.

Other records set by Walker during 1962 were in the Shreveport Relays when he ran a 48.5 and in the Gulf States Conference meet in Hammond when he recorded his career best of 47.4 to better the old standard of 47.5 by another Northeast runner, Dick Hays, in 1960.

Walker's other 1962 victories in the quarter came in the Southwest Recreation Meet in 48.5, in a triangular meet in Monroe in 48.6 and in another triangular affair in Natchitoches in 47.7 in 1961. He also picked up another league championship in 1961 by taking the high hurdles in 15.0.

The hurdles were Walker's specialties when he was a high school athlete at Hallsville, Tex. He was one of the South's best prep thinclads in 1959, topping an outstanding season by winning the Southern AAU junior high and low hurdles.

He came to Northeast in 1960 and, with world record-holder Don Styron ahead of him in the hurdle began to concentrate on the 440.

Walker's first big meet as a collegian was the indoor Chattanooga Relays in March of 1960 when he led division scores by winning the low hurdles and the 440 and running on a relay team to score 11¼ points.

The Chattanooga meet was also Northeast's first big splash in track as the Indians entered teams in both the university and college divisions and won both championships easily. Northeast went on to finish the season unbeaten and gain universal recognition as the best track team in the South.

Walker ended the 1960 season by finishing third in the FSC 440 behind teammates Hays and Jim Mouser and enjoyed an excellent season in 1961, winning the LSU Invitational 440 in 48.1 and the Shreveport Relays quarter in 49.1 before taking the high hurdles and 440 in the GSC meet.

In 1962 Walker helped spark Northeast to another unbeaten season and the unofficial championship of the South. In addition to his 440 chores, he also was a member of the Indian mile relay team, unbeaten in regular season competition, and competed on several other relay teams as well as in the hurdles.

Northeast Coach Bob Groseclose has called Walker "one of the best quarter-milers in the country and the most underrated." After that Sugar Bowl victory, he is expected to lose the "underrated" tag, however.

King Hill Wins NFL Golf Meet

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP)—King Hill, quarterback of the Philadelphia Eagles, won the National Football League players' golf tournament Saturday with a 36-hole score of 154.

Hill was runner-up in the first two tournaments. His 8-over-par 38-40—78 Saturday was good enough to withstand a strong late bid by Dick Lebeau of the Detroit Lions, who took a 41-35—76 for a tourney total of 157.

DOESN'T BELIEVE THERE IS ANY

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP)—Veteran fullback Rick Casares of the Chicago Bears, embittered over the fact that information leaked out revealing he had submitted to lie detector tests, said Saturday, "I don't believe there's any scandal" in the National Football League.

Casares said he took a lie detector test Oct. 17, 1961, and another 10 days ago at the request of National Football League officials.

"I took the tests voluntarily and in complete confidence in order to help the league," he said. "But now I'm upset. I've done nothing wrong but take a couple of tests and all of a sudden my name is in the middle of everything."

Disclosure of the tests came amid rumors of a National Football League betting scandal involving players of several NFL teams. The rumors have prompted investigations which Commissioner Pete Rozelle said in Miami Beach, Fla., were "usual rather than unusual" in checking out reports of possible wrong doings.

"I don't think there is anything to it," said Casares. "I've heard of heavy betting by gamblers and other men. But I can't believe any player has shaved points as they say or worked with any gamblers.

"These rumors have been going on for more than two weeks. If anybody has anything why don't they just drop the bomb instead of printing one rumor here and another one there. I defy anyone to come up with anything about me."

Casares said he was asked to take the lie test in 1961 to clear himself of certain rumors stemming from his association of disreputable individuals.

"I agreed," said the 31-year-old veteran of eight professional football campaigns, "because I wanted to clear my name if anyone thought anything was wrong. When I was asked to take another test I got angry. I said if anything was wrong let somebody come out with it in the open. Again I agreed for what I was told was 'the good of the league.'

"All I got out of it is this rotten publicity. I was told the taking of the test would be strictly confidential. Then a couple of newspaper guys not only find out about the tests but the exact questions asked and everything else."

SECOND J.C. GUARD

Northeast Indians Sign Jack Weaver

An all-state junior college guard from East Central Miss. J. C. is the latest football player to ink an athletic scholarship with Northeast Louisiana State.

Jack Weaver, captain of the East Central team, mailed his signed contract to Northeast Coach Jack Rowan this week. He is 19 years old, stands 5-11 and weighs 205 pounds.

Another East Central lineman, Bill Johnston, signed with Northeast earlier. Weaver was twice an all-conference guard at Newton, Miss., High School before going to East Central where he made the all-state junior college team in 1962.

DOESN'T BELIEVE THERE IS ANY

RICK CASARES

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP)—Veteran fullback Rick Casares of the Chicago Bears, embittered over the fact that information leaked out revealing he had submitted to lie detector tests, said Saturday, "I don't believe there's any scandal" in the National Football League.

Casares said he took a lie detector test Oct. 17, 1961, and another 10 days ago at the request of National Football League officials.

"I took the tests voluntarily and in complete confidence in order to help the league," he said. "But now I'm upset. I've done nothing wrong but take a couple of tests and all of a sudden my name is in the middle of everything."

Disclosure of the tests came amid rumors of a National Football League betting scandal involving players of several NFL teams. The rumors have prompted investigations which Commissioner Pete Rozelle said in Miami Beach, Fla., were "usual rather than unusual" in checking out reports of possible wrong doings.

"I don't think there is anything to it," said Casares. "I've heard of heavy betting by gamblers and other men. But I can't believe any player has shaved points as they say or worked with any gamblers.

"These rumors have been going on for more than two weeks. If anybody has anything why don't they just drop the bomb instead of printing one rumor here and another one there. I defy anyone to come up with anything about me."

Casares said he was asked to take the lie test in 1961 to clear himself of certain rumors stemming from his association of disreputable individuals.

"I agreed," said the 31-year-old veteran of eight professional football campaigns, "because I wanted to clear my name if anyone thought anything was wrong. When I was asked to take another test I got angry. I said if anything was wrong let somebody come out with it in the open. Again I agreed for what I was told was 'the good of the league.'

"All I got out of it is this rotten publicity. I was told the taking of the test would be strictly confidential. Then a couple of newspaper guys not only find out about the tests but the exact questions asked and everything else."

Culpepper Awarded

BOSTON (AP) — Scholar-linebacker John Patrick Culpepper of Texas became the fifth Southwest player in the 17-year history of the Swede Nelson Award to be presented college football's prized sportsmanship honor Saturday night.

An all-state junior college guard from East Central (Miss.) J. C. is the latest football player to ink an athletic scholarship with Northeast Louisiana State.

Jack Weaver, captain of the East Central team, mailed his signed contract to Northeast Coach Jack Rowan this week. He is 19 years old, stands 5-11 and weighs 205 pounds.

80,000 Books In Ouachita Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS,
Ouachita Parish Librarian

On January first the book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library stood at the total figure of 80,000 books. One year ago it did not seem possible that we could reach this goal in a period of one year and we are very happy that we did. During the year 1962 a total of [illegible] books were added to the collection of the library while [illegible] were withdrawn because they were no longer in condition for library circulation. Beginning the year with [illegible] books, adding [illegible] and removing [illegible] left an exact total of 80,000 volumes. Of this number [illegible] are adult books and [illegible] are juvenile books. This is a phenomenal increase from the day fifteen years ago, when the Ouachita Parish Public Library became a tax supported institution with a book collection of [illegible] volumes of which [illegible] were adult books and [illegible] were juvenile books. In order to meet the minimum standards as formulated by the American Library Association the Ouachita Parish Public Library should have [illegible] books. This is one book per capita according to the 1960 census figures. We hope to reach this goal within the next two years, that is by January first [illegible].

This afternoon at 2 the Main Library at [illegible] Avenue will open to give Sunday service to the people of the parish for the first time. It will be open for three hours, that is from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. These hours should not interfere with anyone's church activities (they were selected with this in mind). Public libraries in most large cities of the country are open on Sunday afternoon, and we hope that the people of the Parish are going to enjoy this service.

There are many fine and interesting new books available for you to read and [illegible] urge you to take advantage of them. First let us look at the new fiction title. "The Fourth of June" is the first novel [illegible] by David Benedictus. It has its setting at an English Public school and is a frank revelation of life at such an institution. Alfred Duggan's new historical novel is called "Lord Geoffrey's Fancy" and will appeal to his steady readers. "Voyage to Santa Fe" is the title of the latest book by Janice Holt Giles who writes so well about pioneer days in our country. Many readers will enjoy [illegible] "[illegible] Way" by Doris Leslie is an interesting biographical novel based on the life of the 15th century poet Francois Villon. "The Other Side of the Street" by Sidney Offit is a modern day novel of a family who refused to face reality. A novel of superficial experiences which will appeal to a limited audience is "The Seven Sisters" by Frederick Prokosch. "Kingside" by Ysabel Rennie is a novel of big business and will interest many readers. For readers of mystery stories there are three new titles: "The China Governess" by Margery Allingham, "No Questions Asked" by Forbes Rydell and "The Body at Madman's Bend" by Arthur Upfield.

The field of non-fiction offers a variety of interesting material. "Decisive Battles of the Bible" by Edward Longstreth is a very fine book. "Americans Abroad" by Charles Robert Temple contains much valuable information for Americans planning to live in a foreign country. "Great Stagecoach Robbers of the West" is a most interesting account written by Eugene B. Block. "How to be Brief: An Index to Simple Writing" is a very fine book written by Rudolf Franz Flesch. "The Great White Mantle" by David O. Woodbury is an interesting account of the ice age. A new title in the science series published by Life Magazine is "The Earth" by Arthur Beiser. Joseph Wood Krutch, one of our outstanding living naturalists, has written a very fine book called "A Treasury of Birdlore."

"Our Synthetic Environment" by Lewis Berber is a good discussion of many of the hazards of present day life. "Lillies and Their Cultivation" by Harry George Fogg will be eagerly welcomed by the gardeners of the community. "Heloise's Housekeeping Hints" will be eagerly read by the many people who enjoy her column in the Monroe Morning World. A new cookbook added to the large cookbook collection is "Country Flavor Cookbook" by Haydn S. Pearson. A very fine history of the Standard Oil Company of California was sent as a gift to the Library. It is "Formative Years in the Far West" by Gerald Taylor White. A most beautiful new book in the field of architecture is "Architecture: Man in Possession of his Earth" by Frank Lloyd Wright. A new book of modern poetry is "Imperatives" by Anthony Ostroff. James Thurber has a new volume of humor called "Credos and Curios." Two other books of humorous reminiscenses are "Look Both Ways" by Hilda Espy and "Yesterday's Child" by Janet Kern.

"Adventures in Caucasia" is a reprint of an early book by Alexander Dumas. A new book in the field of archeaology is "The Grandeur That Was Rome" by John Clarke Stobart. "Texas" by Stanley Walker is an appreciation of his home state written by the newspaper columnist who loved it devotedly. "New Mexico: A History of Four Centuries" is a very excellent book written by Warren A. Beck. Biographies are always popular and there are several good ones this week. "Einstein: A Profile of the Man" by Peter Michelmore; "Goering" by Roger Manvell; "In Search of Greatness", the autobiography of Yousuf Karsh and "The Autobiography of Upton Sinclair." The love letters of Woodrow Wilson have been edited by his daughter and published under the title of "The Priceless Gift"; "The Baroness and the General" is a fascinating story of a little-known period of the American Revolution. Last of all there is a very fine book of information written by Miriam Griffin Reeves called "The Governors of Louisiana." It is a much needed volume and one we are happy to have. Remember the new library hours and come to see us this afternoon.

Here we are at 1963, with our year's gayest social week just behind us. Monroe is at its most festive, with out of town visitors here to inspire even more parties than the holidays always hold.

Guests of the DUNCAN COOKS were the DUNCAN COOKS JR., who were en route from duty on Guam to a new assignment in California. Louise entertained with a sherry party honoring her daughter-in-law, Fran, last Saturday afternoon in her home on McKinley. Bright red antherium lilies flown in from Hawaii filled a cut glass bowl in the living room, where the Christmas tree stood in one corner.

Centering the dining table was an epergne filled with red carnations and white tapers. BENNIE ABELL served sherry at one end of the table, while MERLE ADAMS presided at the silver coffee service. Others who assisted were Louise's granddaughter BETH COOK, KAY ADAMS, and from Baton Rouge, ELLA ZEAGLER and GRACE COOK.

Two friends from high school days were reunited for the first time in years when ADELAIDE WYATT came in from Bay St. Louis, Miss., while MARY LAVINIA M'LENDON was here from Greensboro, North Carolina visiting her mother, WILHEMINA INABNET. Adelaide was the guest of her aunt, MRS. W. S. HANCOCK . . . Last Friday morning, BETTY MOORE and KAK SHELTON invited a group of ladies to a coffee party honoring these two. The Moore home, where the party was held, was decorated throughout in a holiday mood. The dining room table was covered with a white net cloth appliqued with green felt Christmas trees. A green candle wreathed in white and silver balls served as centerpiece with the coffee service at one end of the table. Hot cider was served in the den from a table decorated with red apples and holly. Red carnations stood on a side table. About thirty friends called between ten-thirty and noon.

Saturday evening the JACK INABNETS were hosts at a small open house honoring the McLendons. As she greeted her guests, Nora Marie was wearing an after - five dress of aqua satin with dyed - to-match shoes. Mary Lavinia chose black crepe caught with a large rhinestone clip . . . A lace cloth covered the dining table, which was centered with green ice roses arranged with gold balls. Guests were invited to call between eight and ten in the evening.

Visitors from Atlanta, Georgia, the JIM EWINGS, were honored at a reception in the home of the EDMUND BROWNS last Saturday evening. Co-hosts were the ARMAND M'HENRYS, JR. For her party, Leila chose a late - day dress of turquoise silk. June was wearing red chiffon, and Bitza, a white matelasse sheath with drape of the material at the back of the neckline. Other out-of-town guests attending this party included CAROL PARSONS of Old Greenwich, Connecticut; CAROLINE and JACK M'LEAN of Shreveport; and ANN and JACK TERZIA of Baton Rouge.

We do hear tell that one of the most fabulous parties of the year was that given by the JOHN BROWNS, formerly of Monroe, honoring their debutante daughter, SUE, at Brook Hollow Country club in Dallas. Sue had been presented earlier in the season with the Idlewild Debutante club. For this affair, Brook Hollow was decorated throughout in desert colors of pink, yellows and orangey-reds. Silk striped in pink and gold covered the ceilings, with hanging baskets of carnations and roses in the sunset colors. In the entrance, a tree of carnations and roses touched the ceiling, with the same flowers repeated in five foot trees which decorated buffet tables. Individual tables, covered with pink or orange, were centered with topiary trees of roses and-or carnations.

Sue chose for her party a ball gown of white peau d'ange, styled with long bodice embroidered with sequins and pearls and full skirt. Mother Susie wore a long - sleeved red velvet with pink chiffon skirt and her rubies.

Music for dancing was provided by Joe Reichman and his orchestra in the ballroom, and by the Dukes of Dixieland in the teenage room. A college combo alternated with the orchestras. A number of Monroyans attended the party, including JANE and JOHN SHERROUSE, JR., and their daughter SUSAN; BERNICE and HAROLD WOODS, CAROLYN CORDELL and HARDEMAN CORDELL; HANK BIEDENHARN; DIANE KING; and GEORGE M. SNELLINGS, III.

Celebrating their twenty - first wedding anniversary, VIRGINIA and HANK HARGROVE invited intimate friends to a small open house last Saturday evening. In the living room, where the hosts received, all white flowers, chrysanthemums and stock, were used. In the family room, colorful Mexican containers held fruit and nuts with yew. A ceramic rooster and bayberry candle decorated the round coffee table where a hot clam dip and other finger foods were served.

Their fourteenth anniversary coming on New Year's Eve, DOT and JIM WILLIAMS entertained with a watch party, followed by midnight breakfast. A cluster of gold bells, with streamers reading "1963" hung above the mantel. In the den, a white tiered container was arranged with a green candle and lemons, limes, and oranges with ivy.

Ten couples were seated for breakfast in the dining room, where the flowers were white chrysanthemums and stock. The menu included ham with a pecan and cranberry sauce, grits au gratin, scrambled eggs, hot biscuits, and champagne, of course.

Open house was held last Friday evening by the LARRY ROBERTS in their home on Country Club drive. Holiday red was noted in living room decorations, with a sleigh filled with red satin balls and red candles on the piano. Red balls were arranged with white foliage on the coffee table. Helen wore for the party a sheath of turquoise brocade with matching shoes. About seventy - five guests called between seven - thirty and ten.

One of the more unusual New Year's Eve affairs this year was the costume party given by MARILYN and TOM M'MAHON at their home. Guests were invited to come dressed to represent an American Era, and the hosts themselves were Indians.

Prizes for the best costumes were awarded to BENNIE ANDREWS as Abraham Lincoln and ETHEL LANCASTER as a dance hall girl. Ruby Andrews was Mary Todd and Sid Lancaster, a gambler. Other costumes noted at the party were OPPIE ALLEN'S Bunny Club outfit and the flapper dresses worn by SHIRLEY TARPLEY and BETTY HARRIS . . . In hospital coats, DIXIE and DICK WARE represented Medicare . . . BILL ALLEN was a pirate and DICK JONES, a gypsy . . . Beatniks included GRACIE and DOUG SINGLEY, JERRY RAINEY, and CAROL THOMPSON. Thirty - two guests attended the party.

Here are some cheery words by Arthur Hugh Clough for those who find the idea of a whole new year somewhat discouraging:

Say not the struggle naught availeth,
The labor and the wounds are vain,
The enemy faints not, nor faileth,
And as things have been they remain.
If hopes are dupes, fears may be liars;
It may be, in yon smoke concealed
Your comardes chase e'en now the fliers,
And but for you possess the field.
For while the tired waves, vainly breaking,
Seem here no painful inch to gain,
Far back, through creeks and inlets making,
Comes silent, flooding in, the main.
And not by eastern windows only,
When daylight comes, comes in the light,
In front the sun climbs slow, how slowly,
But westward, look, the land is bright.

Visitors from Atlanta, Georgia, the JIM EWINGS, were honored at a reception in the home of the EDMUND BROWNS last Saturday evening. Co-hosts were the ARMAND M'HENRYS, JR. For her party, Leila chose a late - day dress of turquoise silk. June was wearing red chiffon, and Bitza, a white matelasse sheath with drape of the material at the back of the neckline. Other out-of-town guests attending this party included CAROL PARSONS of Old Greenwich, Connecticut; CAROLINE and JACK M'LEAN of Shreveport; and ANN and JACK TERZIA of Baton Rouge.

We do hear tell that one of the most fabulous parties of the year was that given by the JOHN BROWNS, formerly of Monroe, honoring their debutante daughter, SUE, at Brook Hollow Country club in Dallas. Sue had been presented earlier in the season with the Idlewild Debutante club. For this affair, Brook Hollow was decorated throughout in desert colors of pink, yellows and orangey-reds. Silk striped in pink and gold covered the ceilings, with hanging baskets of carnations and roses in the sunset colors. In the entrance, a tree of carnations and roses touched the ceiling, with the same flowers repeated in five foot trees which decorated buffet tables. Individual tables, covered with pink or orange, were centered with topiary trees of roses and-or carnations.

Sue chose for her party a ball gown of white peau d'ange, styled with long bodice embroidered with sequins and pearls and full skirt. Mother Susie wore a long - sleeved red velvet with pink chiffon skirt and her rubies.

Music for dancing was provided by Joe Reichman and his orchestra in the ballroom, and by the Dukes of Dixieland in the teenage room. A college combo alternated with the orchestras. A number of Monroyans attended the party, including JANE and JOHN SHERROUSE, JR., and their daughter SUSAN; BERNICE and HAROLD WOODS, CAROLYN CORDELL and HARDEMAN CORDELL; HANK BIEDENHARN; DIANE KING; and GEORGE M. SNELLINGS, III.

Celebrating their twenty - first wedding anniversary, VIRGINIA and HANK HARGROVE invited intimate friends to a small open house last Saturday evening. In the living room, where the hosts received, all white flowers, chrysanthemums and stock, were used. In the family room, colorful Mexican containers held fruit and nuts with yew. A ceramic rooster and bayberry candle decorated the round coffee table where a hot clam dip and other finger foods were served.

Their fourteenth anniversary coming on New Year's Eve, DOT and JIM WILLIAMS entertained with a watch party, followed by midnight breakfast. A cluster of gold bells, with streamers reading "1963" hung above the mantel. In the den, a white tiered container was arranged with a green candle and lemons, limes, and oranges with ivy.

Ten couples were seated for breakfast in the dining room, where the flowers were white chrysanthemums and stock. The menu included ham with a pecan and cranberry sauce, grits au gratin, scrambled eggs, hot biscuits, and champagne, of course.

Open house was held last Friday evening by the LARRY ROBERTS in their home on Country Club drive. Holiday red was noted in living room decorations, with a sleigh filled with red satin balls and red candles on the piano. Red balls were arranged with white foliage on the coffee table. Helen wore for the party a sheath of turquoise brocade with matching shoes. About seventy - five guests called between seven - thirty and ten.

One of the more unusual New Year's Eve affairs this year was the costume party given by MARILYN and TOM M'MAHON at their home. Guests were invited to come dressed to represent an American Era, and the hosts themselves were Indians.

Prizes for the best costumes were awarded to BENNIE ANDREWS as Abraham Lincoln; and ETHEL LANCASTER as a dance-hall girl. Ruby Andrews was Mary Todd and Sid Lancaster, a gambler. Other costumes noted at the party were OPPIE ALLEN's Bunny Club outfit and the flapper dresses worn by SHIRLEY TARPLEY and BETTY HARRIS . . . In hospital coats, DIXIE and DICK WARE represented Medicare . . . BILL ALLEN was a pirate and DICK JONES, a gypsy . . . Beatniks included GRACIE and DOUG SINGLEY, JERRY RAINEY, and CAROL THOMPSON. Thirty - two guests attended the party.

Here are some cheery words by Arthur Hugh Clough for those who find the idea of a whole new year somewhat discouraging:

Say not the struggle naught availeth,
The labor and the wounds are vain,
The enemy faints not, nor faileth,
And as things have been they remain.
If hopes are dupes, fears may be liars;
It may be, in yon smoke concealed
Your comardes chase e'en now the fliers,
And but for you possess the field.
For while the tired waves, vainly breaking,
Seem here no painful inch to gain,
Far back, through creeks and inlets making,
Comes silent, flooding in, the main.
And not by eastern windows only,
When daylight comes, comes in the light,
In front the sun climbs slow, how slowly,
But westward, look, the land is bright.

Dow-Welch Vows Read

In a double ring ceremony performed at the home of the bride's parents, Miss Mary Pat Welch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos O. Welch, Masonic Avenue, Monroe, became the bride of Lt. Robert L. Dow, son of the late Frank Dow and Mrs. John Wilson of Winnfield.

The ceremony took place December 24 at 10 a.m. with Carroll P. Bennett, minister of the Church of Christ at Natchitoches, reading the vows.

A red and bridal white theme in keeping with the season formed a setting for the nuptials with a white flocked tree and red baubles at one end of the living room. The mirrored mantel was framed with a white [illegible] arrangement centered with red carnations and reflected the burning red tapers and frosted holly placed at one side.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a costume suit of powder blue wool with matching fur collar. Her hat was an open crowned Milan straw with a circlet of net framing her face. She wore accessories of gray metallic and carried a crescent bouquet of miniature chrysanthemums tied with silver and satin streamers.

Attending the bride was her cousin, Miss Dianne Welch of Mangham, who wore a full skirted frock of Ceil blue iridescent taffeta with a softly crushed cummerbund of sapphire. She carried a nosegay of candy-striped carnations.

The bridegroom was attended by Richard Norred, former Northwestern College classmate of Shreveport.

Mrs. Welch, mother of the bride, wore a wool sheath in tones of brown, green and red paisley with a corsage of white and silver.

The reception area of the home was also decorated in the white and red theme, that used white maidenhair fern to outline the buffet, which held red poinsettias at one end and a memory candle and bride's book, attended by Mrs. Tom Denman of Houston, opposite Tulle ruffles interspersed with holly garlanded the reception table, overlaid in white and holding a mass arrangement of white stock and red carnations flanked by white tapers in silver candelabra.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES J. GASTON

Gaston-Sechler Nuptials In Memorial Presbyterian

Memorial Presbyterian Church of West Monroe, was the scene of the ceremony which united in marriage Miss Ellie Louise Sechler and Charles J. Gaston. Dr. Hugh E. Bradshaw performed the double ring vows December 22 at 6 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. John W. Sechler, 212 Miller St., and the late Mr. Sechler and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Prentice C. Gaston, 1108 North 3rd, all of West Monroe.

Green fern and ivy formed a background for the ceremony with baskets of white poinsettias on each side and white candles forming an arch. R. Frank Parker, organist, accompanied James Portman, who sang "Because," and "The Lord's Prayer," and played traditional wedding selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother - in - law, Roy M. Steele, wore a gown of Chantilly lace over satin. The bodice featured a scalloped neckline etched with seed pearls and sequins and long sleeves tapered to points at the wrists. The skirt was styled with floor length panels of lace over satin and tulle, with sides and back highlighted by alternating layers of Chantilly lace and pleated tulle. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a tiera of seed pearls and sequins, and her only jewelry was a white gold cross, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of white split chrysanthemums and carnations atop a white Bible, showered with white satin streamers.

Miss Melba Ann Rogers, maid of honor, wore a street length gown of red peau de soie with fitted bodice, long tapered sleeves and skirt of pleated panels. Her headdress was of red peau de soie and tulle and she wore red satin slippers and carried a large poinsettia encircled by silver ribbons and net, interspersed with red glass bulbs. The matron of honor, Mrs. Roy M. Steele, sister of the bride, was dressed identically to Miss Rogers, as were the junior bridesmaids, Miss Lila Kay Preddy and Miss Lisa Ann Steele, nieces of the bride. The junior attendants wore red peau de soie bandeaux and carried miniature bouquets.

Courtland Gaston attended his brother as best man. Jerry C. Grubbs was groomsman with Robert Preddy and Steven Steele, nephews of the bride, as junior groomsmen. Serving as ushers were Jimmy Funderburk, Fred Newton and Johnny W. Sechler Jr., brother of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Sechler wore a suit of blue brocade satin with white pillbox hat and blue accessories. Her corsage was of blue split chrysanthemums. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Gaston was wearing a gold brocade satin suit with gold accessories, and a corsage of gold and white chrysanthemums.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the reception room of the church. Red poinsettias encircled with ivy centered the bride's table, which was covered with a floor length white net cloth. Candles graced one end of the table. The tiered wedding cake, adorned in red roses, was served by Miss Ann Lea, assisted by Miss Glenda Rogers and Miss Joyce Brown. Mrs. J. R. Preddy presided at the bowl of red punch in which floated a frozen water lily. Mrs. Ken Eppinette had charge of the bride's book.

For a wedding trip to Shreveport the bride changed into a suit of sky blue, featuring a fur collar, with which she wore a white fur hat and black accessories and the corsage from her bouquet. The couple will be at home at 405 Gulpha Drive in West Monroe. Mrs. Gaston graduated from West Monroe high school and is now employed by a West Monroe firm. Mr. Gaston a graduate of West Monroe high school recently returned from serving with the United States Air Force and is now attending Northeast Louisiana State College.

Out - of - town guests were Mrs. E. G. Allison, Patti Allison, Jonesboro, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Darnell of Delhi and Mrs. Robert Antley of North Carolina.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Reminiscing Is Fruitful

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Reminiscing over the past year's events proved fruitful for the College Height's Garden Club. Their show for T.V. and the Garden Center featured arrangements from a flower show sponsored by College Height's last October.

The theme "Beyond the New Horizons," stirred up a lot of imagination toward interpreting the different classes. The designs that were brought in for the show were all made of dried materials, thus luckily they kept beautifully and could be used on this program.

Mrs. Paul Newcomer is the president of College Height's garden club. She brought one of the arrangements for display. Her class theme was "Nautilus." This class called for dried materials using the Hogarth curve for line. Dried Dusty Miller formed the base line of the Hogarth design which was wired onto a tall piece of grey driftwood. Purple clover filled in this line, being massed at the focal area. Accenting this area were groupings of dried mullin leaves. The wood was mounted on a sand stone base, covered with grey sea moss. The combination of grey and purple made a pleasing blend of color. This arrangement won second place red ribbon award.

DRIED DOCK

"The Rocket," by Mrs. John Keller, was interpreted by the use of dried dock forming the vertical line in a tall moss green cylinder container. Okra pods within this line created much rhythm and created contrast. For a filler dried magnolia leaves were placed in a spiral fashion from the base to the middle of the design. Focal interest was formed by a cluster of glycerinized [illegible] leaves. The placement of all the materials in this design carried the eye quickly from the bottom to the top of the arrangement thus depicting the rocket movement. It was a blue ribbon winner.

"Gemini," twin stars of the constellation, was one of the classes that required a lot of thought and imagination. Twin arrangements or two arrangements accenting each other to form a single unit were required. Mrs. W. W. Stevens came up with a work of art in her twin designs made in two identical pewter washed copper compotes. The line material was the graceful swirling Bitter - Sweet. For filler she used dock, Loquat leaves, seed pods, wood roses, dried leather fern, and, for focal interest she used a very unusual dried bean pod, in a cluster. The judges rated this a blue ribbon.

'CAPE'

"Cape Canaveral" was cleverly pictured by Mrs. C. E. Pickering who won the blue ribbon in this class. The base for the design was a curved board covered with sand. The rocket was formed by a diagonal placement of dried yucca leaves to the back side of the base. Red celosia formed the focal area thus the fire from the rockets. This was tied into the base by small glycerinized Magnolia leaves.

The diagonal lines in flower arranging gives the impression of speed, thus the rocket and speed combine.

Mrs. Vernon Whitlock brought in an "extra" for the show. A dried design made of dock to form a triangle design in a low square brown bowl. She used large okra pods within the line for contrast and interest. Dried red celosia formed the center of interest accented by dried golden rod and dried magnolia leaves used in the background of the celosia. It would be lovely for the den in autumn.

Another extra for the show was the "Award of Distinction" won by Mrs. Leslie Clark of West Oak Garden Club in the class "Nautilus." This is the highest award in the classes of blue ribbon winners using predomination of dried materials. The Nautilus makes us think of the submarine that went under the North Pole or the Nautilus shell. A very interesting piece of driftwood formed the background for the horizontal Hogarth line made of dried cedar berries, okra pods and tallow berries. The focal was a rosette shaped okra pod depicting the shell perfectly. The wood was placed to the back side of a marble base. To complete the scene Mrs. Clark used two sea bubbles made of amber glass, placing them to the right side of the base. Thanks, Mrs. Clark, for remaking this design for our show.

This week, watch for the West Oak Garden Club Show. Mrs. August Danti is club president.

The mammoth feast comprised four sittings, each for 10 persons.

The menu included such Chinese delicacies as bear's feet, bird's tongue, elephant trunks, deer, stork, seal and a whole suckling pig. It wound up with a grand dessert consisting of 100 kinds of fruit.

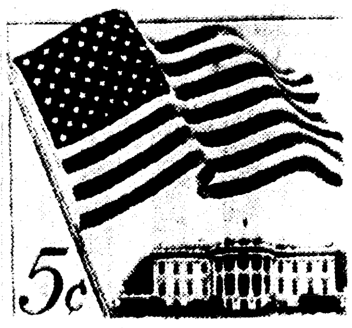
Stamp News

The post office released its newest design for a 5-cent stamp on Dec. 19 in Washington. The stamp pictures the 50-star flag unfurled, with the White House in the lower right and 5 cents in the lower left. No words, not even U.S. Postage, appear on the stamp. Apparently the stars and stripes are sufficiently indicative that this is a United States stamp.



West Germany has issued another stamp in its Old Berlin series, reports the World Wide Philatelic Agency. Featured is the town of Greunewald as it appeared in 1790. The Old Berlin series will be continued in 1963.

Australia will issue a new stamp in March to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Camberra as the capital city. The design of the new stamp will feature the code of arms of Camberra plus a portrait of the late Walter Burley Griffin, American architect who planned the layout of the city.

Tanganyika has issued a special set of four stamps depicting various local scenes. The 30 cents green shows a group of local inhabitants watching groundbreaking activities. The 50 cents multicolor illustrates the raising of the flag on Mt. Kilimanjaro. The 1 shilling 30 features the presidential emblem and the 2 shilling 50 shows the beautiful Independence Monument.

Opera Makes Festival Visit

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — The Opera the Teatro di San Carlo, Naples, will make its first visit to the Edinburgh Festival next year, festival officials announce.

The company will be headed by Renata Tebaldi, for whom Cilea's "Adriana Lecouvreur" is being revived here for the first time since 1905.

ACTION ON THE WING was photographed by Henry J. Kaufman, Washington D. C., with an ultra-miniature camera. It received a special award in the 4th Minox photo contest in which more than 8,000 entries were received from every section of the country.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newfeatures

1. There must be no camera movement. It takes a conscious effort to hold the camera still whereas people usually jab at the button or lever in a motion that may jar the camera at the same time. When properly done, the camera is held firmly against the face with an eye - level camera or against the chest with a reflex camera and the release button is gently squeezed.

Many people can hold a camera and shoot at 1-25th of a second and get a sharp picture. Others require 1-50th or 1-100th to be sure of sharpness. The faster you shoot, the more likely you are to stop camera motion.

To eliminate camera movement completely, there's nothing like a firm tripod and a cable release. Unfortunately, tripods are something of a nuisance and most camera fans refuse to bother with them. Then again, some tripods can be pretty shaky when extended on flimsy legs, especially when a wind is blowing. The point is, anyone going to the trouble of using a tripod should get one that is solid and steady.

2. Sharpness also depends on the angle of subject action, the type of subject action and the camera shutter speed.

It make a difference if you're trying to get a sharp picture of a jet plane, a railroad train, an automobile, a bicyclist, a person walking or a child crawling. And it makes a difference whether they are coming towards you or going past and how far away they are.

It is easier to stop motion when an object or person comes toward the camera and when it is further away. Motion is harder to stop the closer it is to the camera and when it passes in front, from one side to the other.

For instance, if you were alongside railroad tracks, you could get a sharp picture of an approaching head - on train at 1-100th second if it were some distance away or at 1-200th if it were closer. However, it would probably still be blurred at 1-1,000th of a second if shot broadside as it sped by.

For sharper pictures of action therefore, select a camera angle so that the action comes toward the camera and is not too close. Focus on a designated spot and shoot at about 1-200th of a second when the subject reaches that spot.

3. Sharpness, of course, is primarily dependent on accurate focusing . . . and the closer the distance, the more critical it is.

With fixed - focus cameras, anything closer than six feet will be unsharp. For impressive close-ups, protar lenses or portrait attachments should be added to the regular camera lens and distances should be accurately measured according to the instructions.

4. Proper exposure can affect sharpness. An overexposed transparency looks washed out and fuzzy in the highlights.

5. More contrast illumination or a sharper contrast in colors in the subject matter will give an illusion of greater sharpness in the finished picture.

6. Finally, proper processing and printing can affect sharpness. Negatives and transparencies should be checked with a magnifying glass to see if an enlarged print was properly focused or not.

We've been discussing sharpness but that isn't the ultimate factor in whether a picture can be sold or not. Picture content is far more important. If the subject matter is interesting, unusual, dramatic or conveys a powerful emotion, the matter of sharpness is secondary.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Regular Type Holly Beauty

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

While the Home varieties, East Palatka, Foster's hybrid, the wild dahoon and the yaupon which we have discussed recently in the column are showy and especially beautiful hollies, every gardener wants to grow also the "regular" American holly. To most people, this is the prickly - leaved holly with foliage about twice as long as it is wide.

If you will observe a group of wild hollies in the woods, you will soon come to the conclusion that there really were almost as many variations as there are trees. Many different varieties of the "regular" holly have been introduced. There are two which have originated here in the South, however, that are certainly "tops" amongst the "regular" kind.

Some years ago, we published the story of the discovery of a superb native American holly. It was back in the early thirties that your columnist was amazed one morning during the pre-Christmas rush to see women selling the branches of a holly that was the most beautiful type I had ever seen. The berries were long and grew on long stems so that they showed themselves dramatically amongst the fine big folaige.

The leaves were of every type imaginable from tiny round ones with no prickles through small ones with from one to three points and prickles. In fact, this holly looked as if it might have been a natural cross with English holly.

A year went by before the tree was located within a few miles from town, and propagating wood was taken immediately to my friend, the now late James Spencer who, we around the Lindley Nursery used to say, "could root stove - wood." Jim had infinite patience, and in three years, I was able to transplant small trees of his propagating to what is now the Hunt Arboretum.

It was not long after this episode that F. J. LeClair, one of the finest horticulturists in the United States, came to The University of North Carolina. LeClair also discovered this beautiful holly and named it Pearl LeClair in honor of his wife. LeClair also made this variety available to the nurseries, so we can now buy it here in the south.

Similar in many ways to Peral LeClair is a large berried holly discovered by the Thatcher family in Norfolk, Virginia, and introduced by their nursery, the Greenbrier Nursery. This holly is propagated today from a huge tree which was moved to the Greenbrier Nursery although it was a tremendous specimen, at the time. If you want the very best type of the "regular" American holly, get one of these.

Decide Now On Plants

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

With the beginning of the new year it's time for you, Mrs. Gardener, to look over the All American selection of plants to decide if they are a must on your list to give the new look for your 1963 garden.

Two zinnias won honors — Firecracker and Thumbelina. Firecracker bears giant six-inch scarlet flowers with gracefully quilled and waved petals on bushy plants about 30 inches tall. Thumbelina zinnia, the first Gold Medal award winner since the Fire Chief Petunia in 1950, is a six-inch midget. Plants begin to bloom when only three inches tall and are covered with blooms all summer. White, yellow, pink, lavender, orange and scarlet.

The All - America Rose, winner for 1963, is Tropicana. This is a brilliant orange-red rose and is claimed to be adapted to all parts of the country. The height varies from three feet in cooler temperate areas to five and six feet in damper hotter regions. The plant has a constant flow of flowers on the regular wood. Flowers are 4½ to five inches in diameter and last five to six days when cut, retaining their orange - red color whether they are on the plant or in the house.

SEWING

Here are some points to remember in selecting interfacing to help you make a custom look garment. Match the fabric in color as near as possible and be no heavier and sometimes lighter weight than the fabric of the garment. Be sure that it is pre - shrunk and that it has some "give" for garment to move as the body moves. Woven fabrics have more give than nonwoven. Be sure that the interfacing will react to laundry or dry cleaning processes the same as fabric used with. Should be washable if garment is to be washed. That usually it is best to place interfacing next to garment and not to facing.

HOME LIGHTING

Home lighting means more than simply placing lamps at certain points around the house. Lighting the home can accent or change wall colors, or make a room seem cooler or warmer. There are four different kinds of lighting and you may need all of them. They are roomwide, task, perimeter and accent. Task lighting gives light for specific jobs. Perimeter lighting brightens walls and ceilings. Accent lighting spotlights an object in the room such as a portrait or a flower arrangement.

Glare is misplaced light and can be produced by insufficient lighting as well as by too much light and is harmful to the eyes.

Lamp shades can serve different purposes also. All shades should conceal the location if the lighted bulb and the inside of all lamp shapes should be white to reflect the light and reduce glare.

You can give walls a different color, too with lighting tricks. Inside frost or white incandescent bulbs give walls a slight orange cast. Tinted bulbs produce subtle tones of the bulb color. For a cool atmosphere, use cool shades of incandescent bulbs and cool white fluorescent lights. Warm white fluorescent lights and pink and yellow incandescent bulbs produce the opposite effect.

YOUTH

Below are thoughts taken from the article called the "Youth's Bill of Rights," which is directed to parents, teachers and other adult leaders of young people. These are intended to be guide lines in directing young people as presented by our family life specialist, Alice Teddlie.

Stand by us, not over us. Give us the feeling that we are not alone in world that we can always count on adults, make us feel that we are loved and wanted. Don't make us feel inferior. We doubt ourselves enough without you confirming it. Predicting failure for us won't help us succeed. Show interest in what we're doing. Teach us by example, what you are speaks louder than your word. Prepare us to lead our lives, not yours. Make us feel that our home belongs to us. Treat us as junior partners in the firm. Give us direct answers to direct questions. Train us by being affectionately firm.

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: An epoxy plastic waterproofing compound has been recommended to me for leaky basement walls. Can you tell me something about it? Will it go over painted walls?

ANSWER: This is the material often used for waterproofing the outside of boat hulls. It will do an excellent job. But enough to do an entire basement might cost more than you planned on spending. Better check the prices if you plan on waterproofing all the walls rather than just a section or two.

It will adhere firmly over paint if the paint is in good condition. Loose or crumbly paint must be scraped off before the compound is applied. All dirt and grease must be removed and the wall must be perfectly dry. The compound consists of two liquids which are mixed before applying. Since the compound dries rather quickly, too much can not be mixed at one time.

Application is by brush. More than one coat is recommended for severe leaky areas. After the compound has hardened, it can be painted with rubber base paint if desired. It is important that the manufacturer's instructions for this product be followed to the letter.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Reminiscing over the past year's events proved fruitful for the College Height's Garden Club. Their show for T.V. and the Garden Center featured arrangements from a flower show sponsored by College Height's last October.

The theme "Beyond the New Horizons," stirred up a lot of imagination toward interpreting the different classes. The designs that were brought in for the show were all made of dried materials, thus luckily they kept beautifully and could be used on this program.

Mrs. Paul Newcomer is the president of College Height's garden club. She brought one of the arrangements for display. Her class theme was "Nautilus." This class called for dried materials using the Hogarth curve for line. Dried dusty Miller formed the basic line of the Hogarth design which was wired onto a tall piece of grey driftwood. Purple clover filled in this line, being massed at the focal area. Accenting this area were groupings of dried mullin leaves. The wood was mounted on a sand stone base, covered with grey sea moss. The combination of grey and purple made a pleasing blend of color. This arrangement won second place (red ribbon award).

DRIED DOCK

"The Rocket," by Mrs. John Keller, was interpreted by the use of dried dock forming the vertical line in a tall moss green cylinder container. Okra pods within this line created much rhythm and created contrast. For a filler, dried magnolia leaves were placed in a spiral fashion from the base to the middle of the design. Focal interest was formed by a cluster of glycerinized legustrum leaves. The placement of all the materials in this design carried the eye quickly from the bottom to the top of the arrangement thus depicting the rocket movement. It was a blue ribbon winner.

"Gemini," twin stars of the constellation, was one of the classes that required a lot of thought and imagination. Twin arrangements or two arrangements accenting each other to form a single unit were required. Mrs. W. W. Stevens came up with a work of art in her twin designs made in two identical pewter washed copper compotes. The line material was the graceful swirling Bitter - Sweet. For filler she used dock, Loquat leaves, seed pods, wood roses, dried leather fern, and, for focal interest she used a very unusual dried bean pod, in a cluster. The judges rated this a blue ribbon.

'CAPE'

"Cape Canaveral" was cleverly pictured by Mrs. C. E. Pickering who won the blue ribbon in this class. The base for the design was a curved board covered with sand. The rocket was formed by a diagonal placement of dried yucca leaves to the back side of the base. Red celosia formed the focal area (thus the fire from the rocket). This was tied into the base by small glycerinized Magnolia leaves.

The diagonal lines in flower-arranging gives the impression of speed, thus the rocket and speed coincide.

Mrs. Vernon Whitlock brought in an "extra" for the show. A dried design made of dock to form a triangle design in a low square brown bowl. She used large okra pods within the line for contrast and interest. Dried red celosia formed the center of interest accented by dried golden rod and dried magnolia leaves used in the background of the celosia. It would be lovely for the den anytime.

Another extra for the show was the "Award of Distinction," won by Mrs. Leslie Clark of West Oak Garden Club in the class "Nautilus." This is the highest award in the classes of blue ribbon winners using predomination of dried materials. The Nautilus makes us think of the submarine that went under the North Pole, or the Nautilus shell. A very interesting piece of driftwood formed the background for the horizontal Hogarth line made of dried cedar berries, okra pods and tallow berries. The focal was a rosette shaped okra pod depicting the shell perfectly. The wood was placed to the back side of a marble base. To complete the scene Mrs. Clark used two sea bubbles made of amber glass, placing them to the right side of the base. Thanks, Mrs. Clark, for remaking this design for our show.

This week, watch for the West Oak Garden Club Show. Mrs. August Danti is club president.

Movie Group Holds Banquet For Two Days

HONG KONG (AP) — A 100 - course Ching Dynasty imperial banquet lasting two days was held by a group of Cantonese opera and movie workers in this British colony.

The mammoth feast comprised four sittings, each for 16 persons.

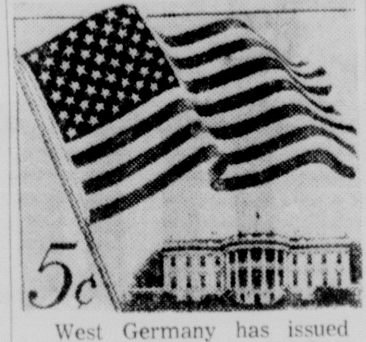
The menu included such Chinese delicacies as bear's foot, bird's tongue, elephant trunk, deer, stork, seal and a whole suckling pig. It wound up with a grand dessert consisting of 100 kinds of fruit.

The feast cost more than $600, equivalent to two years' pay for the average worker in Hong Kong.

The feast, known as the "Manchu - Chinese complete banquet," took a local restaurant two weeks to prepare.

Stamp News

The post office released its newest design for a 5-cent stamp on Dec. 19 in Washington. The stamp pictures the 50-star flag unfurled, with the White House in the lower right and 5 cents in the lower left. No words, not even U.S. Postage, appear on the stamp. Apparently the stars and stripes are sufficiently indicative that this is a United States stamp.



West Germany has issued another stamp in its Old Berlin series, reports the World Wide Philatelic Agency. Featured is the town of Greunewald as it appeared in 1790. The Old Berlin series will be continued in 1963.

Australia will issue a new stamp in March to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Camberra as the capital city. The design of the new stamp will feature the code of arms of Camberra plus a portrait of the late Walter Burley Griffin, American architect who planned the layout of the city.

Tanganyika has issued a special set of four stamps depicting various local scenes. The 30 cents green shows a group of local inhabitants watching groundbreaking activities. The 50 cents multicolor illustrates the raising of the flag on Mt. Kilimanjaro. The 1 shilling 30 features the presidential emblem and the 2 shilling 50 shows the beautiful Independence Monument.

Opera Makes Festival Visit

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — The Opera the Teatro di San Carlo, Naples, will make its first visit to the Edinburgh Festival next year, festival officials announce.

The company will be headed by Renata Tebaldi, for whom Cilea's "Adriana Lecouvreur" is being revived here for the first time since 1906.

ACTION ON THE WING was photographed by Henry J. Kaufman, Washington D. C., with an ultra-miniature camera. It received a special award in the 4th Minox photo contest in which more than 8,000 entries were received from every section of the country.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newfeatures

1. There must be no camera movement. It takes a conscious effort to hold the camera still whereas people usually jab at the button or lever in a motion that may jar the camera at the same time. When properly done, the camera is held firmly against the face (with an eye - level camera) or against the chest with a relfex camera) and the release button is gently squeezed.

Many people can hold a camera and shoot at 1-25th of a second and get a sharp picture. Others require 1-50th or 1-100th to be sure of sharpness. The faster you shoot, the more likely you are to stop camera motion.

To eliminate camera movement completely, there's nothing like a firm tripod and a cable release. Unfortunately, tripods are something of a nuisance and most camera fans refuse to bother with them. Then again, some tripods can be pretty shaky when extended on flimsy legs, especially when a wind is blowing. The point is, anyone going to the trouble of using a tripod should get one that is solid and steady.

2. Sharpness also depends on the angle of subject action, the type of subject action and the camera shutter speed.

It make a difference if you're trying to get a sharp picture of a jet plane, a railroad train, an automobile, a bicyclist, a person walking or a child crawling. And it makes a difference whether they are coming towards you or going past and how far away they are.

It is easier to stop motion when an object or person comes toward the camera and when it is further away. Motion is harder to stop the closer it is to the camera and when it passes in front, from one side to the other.

For instance, if you were alongside railroad tracks, you could get a sharp picture of an approaching head - on train at 1-100th second if it were some distance away or at 1-200th if it were closer. However, it would probably still be blurred at 1-1,000th of a second if shot broadside as it sped by.

For sharper pictures of action therefore, select a camera angle so that the action comes toward the camera and is not too close. Focus on a designated spot and shoot at about 1-200th of a second when the subject reaches that spot.

3. Sharpness, of course, is primarily dependent on accurate focusing . . and the closer the distance, the more critical it is.

With fixed - focus cameras, anything closer than six feet will be unsharp. For impressive close-ups, protar lenses or portrait attachments should be added to the regular camera lens and distances should be accurately measured according to the instructions.

4. Proper exposure can affect sharpness. An overexposed transparency looks washed out and fuzzy in the highlights.

5. More contrast illumination or a sharper contrast in colors in the subject matter will give an illusion of greater sharpness in the finished picture.

6. Finally, proper processing and printing can affect sharpness. Negatives and transparencies should be checked with a magnifying glass to see if an enlarged print was properly focused or not.

We've been discussing sharpness but that isn't the ultimate factor in whether a picture can be sold or not. Picture content is far more important. If the subject matter is interesting, unusual, dramatic or conveys a powerful emotion, the matter of sharpness is secondary.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Regular Type Holly Beauty

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

While the Home varieties, East Palatka, Foster's hybrid, the wild dahoon and the yaupon which we have discussed recently in the column are showy and especially beautiful hollies, every gardener wants to grow also the "regular" American holly. To most people, this is the prickly - leaved holly with foliage about twice as long as it is wide.

If you will observe a group of wild hollies in the woods, you will soon come to the conclusion that there really were almost as many variations as there are trees. Many different varieties of the "regular" holly have been introduced. There are two which have originated here in the South, however, that are certainly "tops" amongst the "regular" kind.

Some years ago, we published the story of the discovery of a superb native American holly. It was back in the early thirties that your columnist was amazed one morning during the pre-Christmas rush to see women selling the branches of a holly that was the most beautiful type I had ever seen. The berries were long and grew on long stems so that they showed themselves dramatically amongst the fine big folaige.

The leaves were of every type imaginable from tiny round ones with no prickles through small ones with from one to three points and prickles. In fact, this holly looked as if it might have been a natural cross with English holly.

A year went by before the tree was located within a few miles from town, and propagating wood was taken immediately to my friend, the now late James Spencer who, we around the Lindley Nursery used to say, "could root stove - wood." Jim had infinite patience, and in three years, I was able to transplant small trees of his propagating to what is now the Hunt Arboretum.

It was not long after this episode that F. J. LeClair, one of the finest horticulturists in the United States, came to The University of North Carolina. LeClair also discovered this beautiful holly and named it Pearl LeClair in honor of his wife. LeClair also made this variety available to the nurseries, so we can now buy it here in the south.

Similar in many ways to Peral LeClair is a large berried holly discovered by the Thatcher family in Norfolk, Virginia, and introduced by their nursery, the Greenbrier Nursery. This holly is propagated today from a huge tree which was moved to the Greenbrier Nursery although it was a tremendous specimen, at the time. If you want the very best type of the "regular" American holly, get one of these.

Decide Now On Plants

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

With the beginning of the new year it's time for you, Mrs. Gardener, to look over the All American selection of plants to decide if they are a must on your list to give the new look for your 1963 garden.

Two zinnias won honors — Firecracker and Thumbelina. Firecracker bears giant six-inch scarlet flowers with gracefully quilled and waved petals on bushy plants about 30 inches tall. Thumbelina zinnia, the first Gold Medal award winner since the Fire Chief Petunia in 1950, is a six-inch midget. Plants begin to bloom when only three-inches tall and are covered with blooms all summer: White, yellow, pink, lavender, orange and scarlet.

The four All-American gladiolus are frisky, small-flowered, deep scarlet with golden picotee edge; Goldilocks, small - flowered, golden - yellow; Morning Sun, a ruffled deep yellow with large florets and Victory, a large brilliant scarlet with deeper throat color.

The All - America Rose, winner for 1963, is tropicana. This is a brilliant orange, red rose and is claimed to be adapted to all parts of the country. The height varies from three feet in cooler temperate areas to five and six feet in damper hotter regions. The plant has a constant flow of flowers on the regular wood. Flowers are 4½ to five inches in diameter and last five to six days when cut, retaining their orange, red color whether they are on the plant or in the house.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD KEENER HOWARD JR.

Howard-Whitaker Vows Solemnized In Arkansas

Eudora Baptist Church, Eudora, Ark., was scene of the ceremony Sunday, December 23 which united in marriage Miss Judith Ann Whitaker and Richard Keener Howard Jr. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Whitaker of Eudora and Mr. Howard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Keener Howard of Lake Providence.

Rev. Roy D. Bunch performed the double ring vows at 3 p.m. following a program of nuptial music by Miss Gail Swayer, organist, of Oak Grove and Miss Kathryn Parr, Eudora, soloist.

Floor baskets of white carnations and greenery flanked a white satin kneeling bench and an arch entwined with plumosa fern and carnations to form a setting for the exchange of vows. A spiral candle tree centered the background and aisle standards at each pew were marked with white satin bows and single candles.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of white silk faced peau de soie. The bodice featured an empire waist with scoop neckline, etched with pearl and crystal embroidery. The princess skirt enhanced by a back bustle bow, ended in a chapel train. Her only ornament was a diamond drop, gift of the bridegroom. Her English illusion veil was attached to a tiny pearl crown and she carried a Bible topped with an orchid encircled by stephanotis.

Mrs. William Patrick Lane Jr., of Delhi, was matron of honor. Her street length gown of kelly green brocade was styled with scoop neckline, three - quarter sleeves and controlled skirt. She wore a kelly green hat and shoes and carried a white fur muff to which was attached a white poinsettia. Bridesmaids, Miss Dianne Whitaker, sister of the bride; Miss Beverly Binns, her cousin, both of Eudora; Misses Linda and Penny Howard of Lake Providence, sisters of the groom; Miss Sarah Jarboe, Lake Village Ark., and Mrs. Gwin Morris of Waco, Tex., were dressed identically to the honor attendant and carried white fur muffs with red poinsettias attached. All wore single strands of pearls, gift of the bride.

Miss Susan Howard, Lake Providence, sister of the groom, was junior bridesmaid and wore a floor length dress in similar style to the other gowns. Elaine Verser, Eudora, was flower girl and wore a floor length frock of Kelly green taffeta with bubble sleeves.

Robbie Howard of Lake Providence, attended his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Dick Miller, Memphis, Tenn., Joe Fultz, Navasota, Tex., Don Whitehead, Gene Edmondson and Stewart Brown, all of Lake Providence and James Gibbs of Eudora. Brian Howard, brother of the groom, was ringbearer.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents were hosts at a reception in their home. Miss Phyllis Rankin and Miss Bright Hays served the wedding cake and punch from the bride's table which held a central arrangement of white carnations, stock, snapdragons, wedding bells and fern, flanked by five branched silver candelabra holding lighted tapers. For the occasion the bride's mother, Mrs. Whitaker, wore a gold brocade suit and an orchid corsage. Mrs. Howard was wearing a Nile green silk jacket ensemble with an orchid corsage.

The groom's table in the family room featured a red carnation arrangement with red candles in branched candelabra. Misses Myra and Lana Rankin presided at the groom's table and Miss Sandra Styles of Beaumont, Tex., had charge of the bride's book.

After a wedding trip to Dauphin Island, Ala., the couple will be at home in Waco, Texas until July after which they will make their permanent home in Lake Providence.

Heavy Gain Is Recorded By Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's turn-of-the-year trading week produced the largest gain since mid-Nvember on the heaviest volume in a month.

The four-day trading week, shortened by the New Year's holiday, brought turnover of 17,934,[illegible] shares compared with 14,359,630 for the Christmas-week.

The daily average of 4,483,621 shares, however, was the liveliest since the week ended Dec. 8, when 4,78,320 shares was the average.

The week included the turbulent New Year's Eve session of Monday and three others following the Tuesday holiday.

Stock trading for the new year began with a loss on Wednesday followed by a rally Thursday — the same pattern that prevailed in the first two days of 1961 and 1962. A continued advance on Friday clinched the situation for the bullish side.

Reinvestment of funds made available by recent tax-loss selling and profit-taking was the main reason cited by brokers for the vigorous advance. At the same time, they said, new money was drawn to the market from the "sidelines" — cash waiting a likely moment to return to stocks.

The Dow Jones industrial average advanced 10.30 to 662.23.

On Thursday the Dow industrials topped the recovery peak of 653.99 reached Dec. 5. This figure had stood temporarily as an upside barrier. To chart followers this accomplishment signaled a green light for a further intermediate-term advance. The word spread to investors, producing a five-million-share session on Friday.

Additional, on Thursday the rail component of the Dow Jones averages reached its highest level since March 2 and the utility average its highest since April 24. This made for increasing confidence in Wall Street.

The rails were helped by news that the Interstate Commerce Commission had decided to allow Chesapeake & Ohio to control Baltimore & Ohio. The news encouraged other merger candidates to hope for similar action which would result in economies and a better profit picture.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks last week rose 5.5 to 248.4, its biggest gain since the week ended Nov. 17, when it rose 5.9.

Sentiment in the Street was favored by the reports of record department store sales in December and record manufacturing new orders in November. New car sales for the latest period were at the highest figure since the auto boom year of 1955.

On the other hand, the report that President Kennedy is seeking a gradual tax cut tended to dampen the spirits of those who looked for a sharp slash. At the same time, the death of the President's powerful tax-cut ally, Sen. Robert S. Kerr, D-Okla., cast some doubt over the fate in Congress of whatever tax measure the President may submit.

Bond prices made little headway during the first week of trading in the new year. U.S. government issues produced a jumbled pattern for the week and corporates showed mostly narrow changes, but at the end of the week both held near 1962-63 highs established in the final weeks of last year.

Corporate volume for the holiday week on the New York Stock Exchange totaled $24,286,000 par value, about 30 per cent above the previous week's $18,586,000.

Domestic Cotton Futures Market Softens In Week

NEW YORK (AP)—Cotton futures in the domestic market turned softer last week after a show of firmness. At week's end, prices were 30 cents lower to $1.45 lower.

The previous week, futures had been off 50 cents to up $2.30.

Commission house buying and short covering had firmed prices, but softness set in at midweek. Profit-taking, tax selling and the expectation of a pickup in hedging perations pushed prices down later, however.

Sustaining the market during the week was a growing tightness in cotton outside government hands, firmer spot prices and growing doubts in some quarters that there will be new 1963 crop legislation.

During the week, evidence increased that much loan cotton will have to be repossed to carry trade needs into the coming season. Exports by Tuesday had improved somewhat, at 95,000 bales against 47,000 the week previous and 76,000 the same week a year ago. But the total for the season so far, 1,004,000 bales, lags far behind the 2,223,000 bales exported by the same date a year ago.

STEEL IN HOMES

NEW YORK (UPI)—One third of all steel made in America is used in and around the home, according to "Steel Facts," a publication of American Iron and Steel Institute.

This year, the estimated figure will total about 258 pounds for every man, woman and child in the nation. Steel, in addition to being the major material for automobiles, also serves in the home for appliances, storage, service and recreation.

Doris Edwards, of Bastrop, reported her locked car had been burglarized while it was parked in the 300 block of Jackson Street Saturday.

Monroe police also lodged two counts of driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages against West Monroe men early Saturday. Billy Gene Townsend, 25, of Rt. 4, West Monroe, and Adrian Henry Berry, 34, 407 Arrant Rd., West Monroe, were both booked on the counts and held under $435 bonds each. Townsend was apprehended at 12:30 a.m. Saturday in the 3900 block of DeSiard St., while Berry was taken into custody in the 100 block of Sixth Street at 1 a.m.

Youth Shot By Woman At Ruston

RUSTON (Special) — Funeral services will be held today for a 16-year-old Ruston High School student who died Friday night from a gunshot wound.

The youth, John Richard Nixon, died instantly from a single .22 caliber gunshot wound in the head, according to Dr. J. J. Bennett, Lincoln Parish coroner.

The shooting, which was ruled by a coroner's jury as justifiable homicide, occurred at 10 p.m. just outside the bathroom window of a local residence occupied by a widow and her teenage daughter. According to investigating police, Rexon was shot by the widow, who was alone in the house at the time.

Her daughter was out on a date and her mother returned about 9:30 p.m. from taking visitors home. Upon returning she noticed evidence that the house had been entered. A door was ajar, several objects had been disturbed and one of her small dogs was acting frightened, she said.

The woman got a .22 pistol, and after a thorough search, decided that whoever had been in the house left before she returned. Keeping the gun with her, the woman proceeded to take a bath and prepare for bed.

When she had almost finished her bath, she heard a man's voice, she said. She told the intruder that she had a gun and for him to go away and leave her alone.

She thought the person had entered the house and that the voice was coming from outside the closed bathroom door, so she decided to climb out the bathroom window and go for help.

She put on her pajamas and robe, and had opened the window blinds and screen when she saw the man's head just outside the window and fired the fatal shot. She then notified authorities.

Funeral services will be held today at 2 p.m. in the chapel of Kilpatrick's Funeral Home of Ruston, with the Rev. Clyde Fant Jr. officiating. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery in Bernice, under the direction of Kilpatrick's.

Rexon is survived by his motherl Mrs. Edna Rexon and two brothers, William Ray Rexon and Donald Howard Rexon, all of Ruston.

Booster Singing Session Slated On Anniversary

The 26th anniversary of the Booster Singing Convention will be celebrated with the regular monthly singing this afternnon in the auditorium of the Harvey H. Benoit Recreation Center, 1700 Oaklawn Dr.

The singing is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. and last until 4:30 p.m.

"A great number of special singers and quartets from the surrounding parishes and Pine Bluff and Crossett, Ark., are to appear at the affair," said Garland May, president.

The singings, held on the first Sunday of each month, were held in the Missouri Pacific Booster Hall for the first 25 years. After the Booster Hall was torn down, the singings were held at the Southside Methodist Church, but the group retained the title of the Booster Singing.

Heavy Gain Is Recorded By Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's turn-of-the-year trading week produced the largest gain since mid-Nvember on the heaviest volume in a month.

The four-day trading week, shortened by the New Year's holiday, brought turnover of 17,934,-498 shares compared with 14,359,630 for the Christmas-week.

The daily average of 4,483,621 shares, however, was the liveliest since the week ended Dec. 8, when 4,78,320 shares was the average.

The week included the turbulent New Year's Eve session of Monday and three others following the Tuesday holiday.

Stock trading for the new year began with a loss on Wednesday followed by a rally Thursday — the same pattern that prevailed in the first two days of 1961 and 1962. A continued advance on Friday clinched the situation for the bullish side.

Reinvestment of funds made available by recent tax-loss selling and profit-taking was the main reason cited by brokers for the vigorous advance. At the same time, they said, new money was drawn to the market from the "sidelines" — cash waiting a likely moment to return to stocks.

The Dow Jones industrial average advanced 10.80 to 662.23.

On Thursday the Dow industrials topped the recovery peak of 653.99 reached Dec. 5. This figure had stood temporarily as an upside barrier. To chart followers this accomplishment signaled a green light for a further intermediate-term advance. The word spread to investors, producing a five-million-share session on Friday.

Additional, on Thursday the rail component of the Dow Jones averages reached its highest level since March 2 and the utility average its highest since April 24. This made for increasing confidence in Wall Street.

The rails were helped by news that the Interstate Commerce Commission had decided to allow Chesapeake & Ohio to control Baltimore & Ohio. The news encouraged other merger candidates to hope for similar action which would result in economies and a better profit picture.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks last week rose 5.5 to 248.4, its biggest gain since the week ended Nov. 17, when it rose 5.9.

Sentiment in the Street was bolstered by the reports of record department store sales in December and record manufacturers' new orders in November. New car sales for the latest period were at the highest figure since the auto boom year of 1955.

On the other hand, the report that President Kennedy is seeking a gradual tax cut tended to dampen the spirits of those who looked for a sharp slash. At the same time, the death of the President's powerful tax-cut ally, Sen. Robert S. Kerr, D-Okla., cast some doubt over the fate in Congress of whatever tax measure the President may submit.

Bond prices made little headway during the first week of trading in the new year. U.S. government issues produced a jumbled pattern for the week and corporates showed mostly narrow changes, but at the end of the week both held near 1962-63 highs established in the final weeks of last year.

Corporate volume for the holiday week on the New York Stock Exchange totaled $24,286,000 par value,. about 30 per cent above the previous week's $18,586,000.

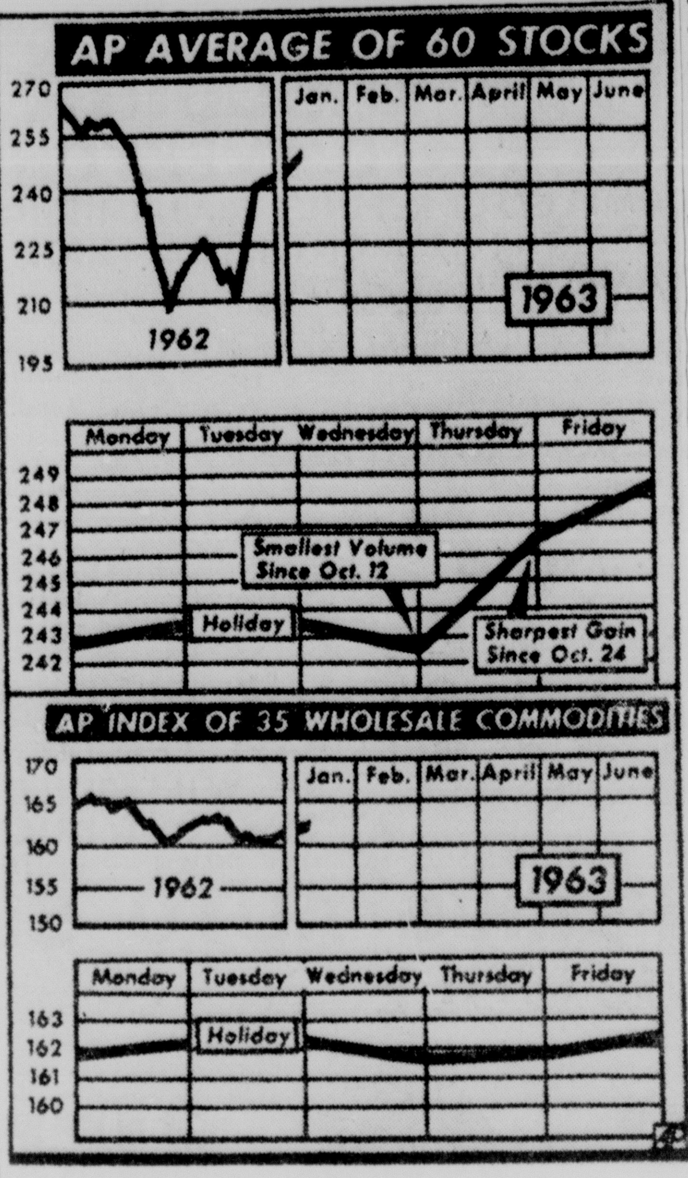
U.S. Property Attack Targets

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)—Police reported two minor attacks aimed at U.S. property Saturday. Apparently they were the work of Belgians angered by U.S. policy of supporting U.N. forces fighting in Katanga.

Bottles of red paint were thrown at the home of a U.S. diplomat but hit the house next door. The parked car of an American was slightly damaged and its tires deflated.



FOR THE THIRD week in a row The Associated Press average of 60 stocks moved higher, closing Friday at 248.4 from 242.9 in the previous period. Industrials led the commodity index which closed at 162.2 today from 161.9 last week. (AP Wirephoto)

Domestic Cotton Futures Market Softens In Week

NEW YORK (AP)—Cotton futures in the domestic market turned softer last week after a show of firmness. At week's end, prices were 30 cents lower to $1.45 lower.

The previous week, futures had been off 50 cents to up $2.30.

Commission house buying and short covering had firmed prices, but softness set in at midweek. Profit-taking, tax selling and the expectation of a pickup in hedging perations pushed prices down later, however.

Sustaining the market during the week was a growing tightness in cotton outside government hands, firmer spot prices and growing doubts in some quarters that there will be new 1963 crop legislation.

During the week, evidence increased that much loan cotton will have to be repossed to carry trade needs into the coming season. Exports by Tuesday had improved somewhat, at 95,000 bales against 47,000 the week previous and 76,000 the same week a year ago. But the total for the season so far, 1,004,000 bales, lags far behind the 2,223,000 bales exported by the same date a year ago.

Youth Shot By Woman At Ruston

RUSTON (Special) — Funeral services will be held today for a 16-year-old Ruston High School student who died Friday night from a gunshot wound.

The youth, John Richard Nixon, died instantly from a single .22 caliber gunshot wound in the head, according to Dr. J. J. Bennett, Lincoln Parish coroner.

The shooting, which was ruled by a coroner's jury as justifiable homicide, occurred at 10 p.m. just outside the bathroom window of a local residence occupied by a widow and her teenage daughter. According to investigating police, Rexon was shot by the widow, who was alone in the house at the time.

Her daughter was out on a date and her mother returned about 9:30 p.m. from taking visitors home. Upon returning she noticed evidence that the house had been entered. A door was ajar, several objects had been disturbed and one of her small dogs was acting frightened, she said.

The woman got a .22 pistol, and after a thorough search, decided that whoever had been in the house left before she returned. Keeping the gun with her, the woman proceeded to take a bath and prepare for bed.

When she had almost finished her bath, she heard a man's voice, she said. She told the intruder that she had a gun and for him to go away and leave her alone.

She thought the person had entered the house and that the voice was coming from outside the closed bathroom door, so she decided to climb out the bathroom window and go for help.

She put on her pajamas and robe, and had opened the window blinds and screen when she saw the man's head just outside the window and fired the fatal shot. She then notified authorities.

Funeral services will be held today at 2 p.m. in the chapel of Kilpatrick's Funeral Home of Ruston, with the Rev. Clyde Fant Jr. officiating. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery in Bernice, under the direction of Kilpatrick's.

Rexon is survived by his motherl Mrs. Edna Rexon and two brothers, William Ray Rexon and Donald Howard Rexon, all of Ruston.

GROVER MARTIN

Open House Is Slated By Local Church

The recently completed building of the Bawcomville Church of Christ, 2326 Jonesboro Road, West Monroe, will be shown to the public at 2:30 p.m. today during an open house program.

In addition to inspection of facilities, a singing program will be conducted, according to Evangelist Grover Martin.

Activities scheduled for today include Bible classes at 9:45 a.m., morning worship at 10:30 a.m., evening worship at 6:30 p.m. A week-long revival also will be launched with services this evening at 7:30 p.m.

Evangelist Martin will deliver the sermons daily through Friday at the same hour.

Baptist Pastors Will Convene At Children's Home

Area Baptist pastors will meet 10 a.m. Tuesday at the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home here, according to the Rev. P. Lionel Crowell of West Monroe, president of the ministerial organization.

Pastors from churches in Ouachita parish, Trenton, Morehouse and Caldwell Baptist associations will attend the meeting at which the Rev. Dr. James T. Horton, pastor of Monroe First Baptist Church, will conduct a Bible exposition.

Wade B. East, who became superintendent of the children's home last August, will address the pastors.

Gospel Concert Is Scheduled

A gospel concert featuring southern quartets will be presented 8 p.m. Thursday at West Monroe High School Auditorium under the sponsorship of the Montgomery Street Church of God.

Featured will be the Statesmen's Quartet of Atlanta, and the Blackwood Brothers Quartet of Memphis. Both groups have appeared on national television programs.

My Answer

By BILLY GRAHAM

I find the following verse very difficult to understand: "All that came before me are robbers, but the sheep did not hear them." Will you explain this for me? F. H.

This verse is found in John 10:8. In it Jesus is explaining the dangerous fact that many people have professed to be saviours, and they have always gotten a following. People are like sheep and they can be very easily led astray. In the days of Christ they used to have large sheepfolds in which the sheep of many different shepherds would be kept. This was to protect the sheep during the night time from wild animals. In the morning the shepherd would come by and call his sheep, and Jesus said that His own sheep would recognize His voice. Many shepherds had come before His time, but they did not hear them. Jesus was actually giving out the evidences of the genuineness of His mission as He said this. Even today there are many false prophets and many false shepherds, and they lead silly people like silly sheep in very strange directions. Only Christ is the true Saviour, and only He came to provide true deliverance from sin.

DURING YEAR

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

A coffee bar . . . a schoolroom prayer . . . a tall candle . . . a book . . . an introduction . . . and a long journey.

These were among items that figured in some of the major religious developments of the past year.

On the basis of various polls and appraisals available concerning 1962's chief religious events, overwhelming top billing must go to the one involving the coffee bar.

This particular refreshment stand operated behind the tiers of seats in St. Peter's Basilica in Rome where the Vatican Ecumenical Council held its first two-months session from Oct. 11 to Dec. 8.

KEY FEATURE

While the council itself, and the new trends it set in motion, were generally cited as the year's main religious milestone, the coffee bar dramatized a key feature of it.

Around the bar, Roman Catholic bishops and Protestant observers, as well as administrators and scholars, compared notes, shared opinions and sought better mutual understanding.

Historians may recognize the coffee bar as "one of the greatest instrument of Christian unity of the century," commented a Protestant observer-delegate, Lutheran Oscar Cullman.

The council reconvenes next fall, having already shown its mood for change, including broad authorization for replacing much of the church's Latin worship services with English, or other national tongues.

OTHER STORIES

The schoolroom prayer:

It was a simple prayer, approved by New York State's board of regents for classroom use, but outlawed by the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled that officially prescribed prayer in school was unconstitutional.

The ruling stirred an uproar. Still to be clarified by the court in pending cases was whether joint prayer in public schools, of any kind, is permissible or will be forbidden by the court as "official" prayer.

The tall candle:

It symbolized the merger of four Lutheran branches into one large denomination of more than 3 million members, the Lutheran Church in America.

At the merger convention in Detroit, climaxing years of planning, the union was sealed as the lighted quarters of the huge candle were brought together, their flames fusing into a single light.

The book:

It was "The Message of Genesis" by the Rev. Dr. Ralph Elliott, an Old Testament professor at the Southern Baptist Midwestern Seminaty in Kansas City.

He was fired, and his book was dropped from print by the denomination's Sunday School board in the face of a campaign by critics who assailed the book for portraying some passages in the creation story as parables.

DISTURBED

The affair disturbed many Baptist scholars and sharpened an old, simmering problem in the church—the tension between ecclesiastical controls and traditional Southern Baptist assertions of theological freedom.

The introduction:

It took place at a first, get-acquainted meeting in Washington, D.C., between commissions of four Protestant denominations set up to explore possibilities of union, on a scale unprecedented in America.

The commission, representing the Episcopal, Methodist and United Presbyterian churches and the United Church of Christ, holds a second session this spring. Two other denominations, the Disciples of Christ and the Evangelical United Brethren, have decided to join in the talks.

The long journey:

It involved 13 Protestant leaders who went to Moscow seeking fuller contacts with the Russian Orthodox Church. Russian church leaders will pay a return call to this country early this year.

The recently completed building of the Bawcomville Church of Christ, 2326 Jonesboro Road, West Monroe, will be shown to the public at 2:30 p.m. today during an open house program.

In addition to inspection of facilities, a singing program will be conducted, according to Evangelist Grover Martin.

Activities scheduled for today include Bible classes at 9:45 a.m., morning worship at 10:30 a.m., evening worship at 6:30 p.m. A week-long revival also will be launched with services this evening at 7:30 p.m.

Area Baptist pastors will meet 10 a.m. Tuesday at the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home here, according to the Rev. P. Lionel Crowell of West Monroe, president of the ministerial organization.

Pastors from churches in Ouachita parish, Trenton, Morehouse and Caldwell Baptist associations will attend the meeting at which the Rev. Dr. James T. Horton, pastor of Monroe First Baptist Church, will conduct a Bible exposition.

Wade B. East, who became superintendent of the children's home last August, will address the pastors.

Gospel Concert Is Scheduled

Featured will be the Statesmen's Quartet of Atlanta, and the Blackwood Brothers Quartet of Memphis. Both groups have appeared on national television programs.

My Answer

By BILLY GRAHAM

I find the following verse very difficult to understand: "All that came before me are robbers, but the sheep did not hear them." Will you explain this for me? F. H.

This verse is found in John 10:8. In it Jesus is explaining the dangerous fact that many people have professed to be saviours, and they have always gotten a following. People are like sheep and they can be very easily led astray. In the days of Christ they used to have large sheepfolds in which the sheep of many different shepherds would be kept. This was to protect the sheep during the night time from wild animals. In the morning the shepherd would come by and call his sheep, and Jesus said that His own sheep would recognize His voice. Many shepherds had come before His time, but they did not hear them. Jesus was actually giving out the evidences of the genuineness of His mission as He said this. Even today there are many false prophets and many false shepherds, and they lead silly people like silly sheep in very strange directions. Only Christ is the true Saviour, and only He came to provide true deliverance from sin.

DURING YEAR

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

A coffee bar. . .a schoolroom prayer. . .a tall candle. . .a book . . .an introduction. and a long journey

These were among items that figured in some of the major religious developments of the past year.

On the basis of various polls and appraisals available concerning 1962's chief religious events, overwhelming top billing must go to the one involving the coffee bar.

This particular refreshment stand operated behind the tiers of seats in St. Peter's Basilica in Rome where the Vatican Ecumenical Council held its first two-months session from Oct. 11 to Dec. 8.

KEY FEATURE

While the council itself, and the new trends it set in motion, were generally cited as the year's main religious milestone, the coffee bar dramatized a key feature of it.

Around the bar, Roman Catholic bishops and Protestant observers, as well as administrators and scholars, compared notes, shared opinions and sought better mutual understanding.

Historians may recognize the coffee bar as "one of the greatest instrument of Christian unity of the century," commented a Protestant observer-delegate, Lutheran Oscar Cullman.

The council reconvenes next fall, having already shown its mood for change, including broad authorization for replacing much of the church's Latin worship services with English, or other national tongues.

OTHER STORIES

As for other top religion stories of the year—

The schoolroom prayer:

It was a simple prayer, approved by New York State's board of regents for classroom use, but outlawed by the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled that officially prescribed prayer in school was unconstitutional.

The ruling stirred an uproar. Still to be clarified by the court in pending cases was whether joint prayer in public schools, of any kind, is permissible or will be forbidden by the court as "official" prayer.

The tall candle:

It symbolized the merger of four Lutheran branches into one large denomination of more than 3 million members, the Lutheran Church in America.

At the merger convention in Detroit, climaxing years of planning, the union was sealed as the lighted quarters of the huge candle were brought together, their flames fusing into a single light.

The book:

It was "The Message of Genesis" by the Rev. Dr. Ralph Elliott, an Old Testament professor at the Southern Baptist Midwestern Seminaty in Kansas City.

He was fired, and his book was dropped from print by the denomination's Sunday School board in the face of a campaign by critics who assailed the book for portraying some passages in the creation story as parables.

DISTURBED

The affair disturbed many Baptist scholars and sharpened an old, simmering problem in the church—the tension between ecclesiastical controls and traditional Southern Baptist assertions of theological freedom.

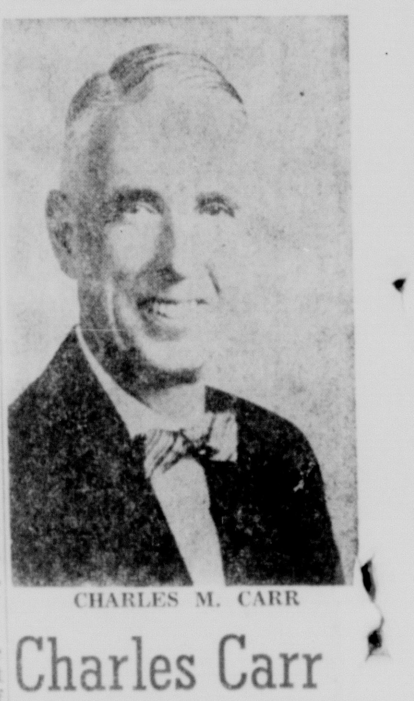
The introduction:

It took place at a first, get-acquainted meeting in Washington, D.C., between commissions of four Protestant denominations set up to explore possibilities of union, on a scale unprecedented in America.

The commission, representing the Episcopal, Methodist and United Presbyterian churches and the United Church of Christ, holds a second session this spring. Two other denominations, the Disciples of Christ and the Evangelical United Brethren, have decided to join in the talks.

The long journey:

It involved 13 Protestant leaders who went to Moscow seeking fuller contacts with the Russian Orthodox Church. Russian church leaders will pay a return call to this country early this year.



CHARLES M. CARR

Charles Carr Speaker At Church Here

A lecture on Christian Science will be presented 8 p.m. Monday at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, 224 Auburn Ave.

Featured speaker will be Charles M. Carr of New York City, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship. He will discuss "How Christian Science Can Help You."

A native of Melrose, Mass., he studied at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He withdrew from business in 1942 to devote his full time to the public practice of Christian Science.

BECAME TEACHER

Ten years later he became an authorized teacher of Christian Science. He served from 1944 to 1954 as a member of the Christian Science Committee on Publication for the State of New Jersey.

The lecture will be open to the public. A nursery will be provided for children.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

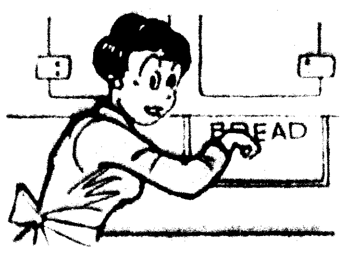
DEAR HELOISE:

I have limited space on my drainboard so my husband nailed a breadbox to the bottom of one of our cupboards above the drainboard.

It is so much easier to reach up and open the breadbox now than it was to lean across the drainboard. It is also nice to have it up out of the way and have the extra space below.



A word of caution: If the ventilation holes in the box are covered by the wall, the bread will mold rapidly. This can be corrected by punching more holes in the bread box where the air can get in it.

We painted the box the same color as our cupboards and walls and it looks quite attractive.

Grateful

BLEACH BLACKOUT

For the ladies who drop bleach on their black dresses which leaves a white spot . . . they can go to any stationery store and buy crayons and color the spot. This can be ironed with a warm iron if applicable to the material.

E. Ison

WIRE WORK

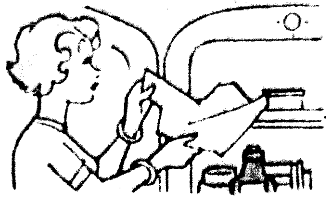
DEAR HELOISE:

I attached cup hooks to the underside of my bed. Now the cords from my electric blanket, bedside clock and lamp can be put in the cuphooks and kept out of the way of the vacuum cleaner. Be sure the cuphooks are on the underneath side of the bed and not on the finished surface.

The cuphooks hold all the wires up off the floor and this makes cleaning so much easier!

Wanda Cutsforth

FOR ICE TRAYS



DEAR HELOISE:

Cut a piece of foil a trifle larger than your ice trays and slide this into your freezer compartment of the refrigerator so that the trays sit on the foil. The trays will never stick!

L. C. Laude

GOOD SPOTTER

DEAR HELOISE:

For mothers of little kiddies who are continually getting grass stains on their clothing . . . the easiest method I have found to remove the stains is to rub the spot with glycerin and let it stand about 45 minutes or so before washing. I find the glycerin does not leave any oil spot at all.

This product can be bought at any drug store and is also good for removing old coffee stains.

Grassy Roots

TIDY TIME

DEAR HELOISE:

For a child's crayon holder, fasten a flower frog—the type with the holes in it big enough to hold crayons—to a paper plate. Then glue a second plate to the bottom.

Fill this full of crayons so that the child can see all of the colors and keep them in the holder on her desk or work table in neat order.

Mrs. Woodrow Teets

KITCHEN EATING

DEAR HELOISE:

For a kitchen tablecloth, I find if I look in the drapery department of the department stores, I can find the nicest designs from remnants!

Most of these come 54 inches or more wide. I make a one-inch hem around the remnant. This material is heavy and a much better grade than most of us can afford to buy for the kitchen table!

Mrs. James Dart

STAMP BOOKS

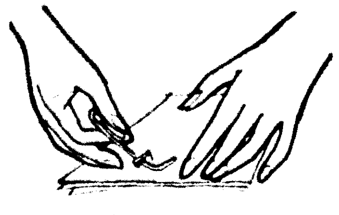
DEAR HELOISE:

The keenest way I know of to put savings stamps in books is to turn about six sheets . . . all at one time . . . face down on your drainboard and get that old bottle sprayer and "spray away"!

As this fine film of water hits the backs of the sheets of stamps, pick up the sheets and put them in the book. No messy sponges or too much water. Fast, easy and perfect!

Former Stamp Licker

EASY DOES IT



DEAR HELOISE:

Did you know that you could remove a staple without a staple-puller? All one has to do is take a paper clip, run it under the staple and pull. It comes right out every time!

Wilder

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's my contribution: For those who take lunches to work, make use of the radiators while they are hot by wrapping a cheese sandwich in foil and placing it on the radiator. Turn it at least once during the morning . . . and by noon, you will have a piping hot sandwich!

Stella McDonald

FINAL RINSE

DEAR HELOISE:

I always add a little vinegar to the rinse water when washing wool skirts or sweaters . . . there will be no perspiration odor.

Alma Hanggi

SOAK IT FIRST

DEAR HELOISE:

If milk or any other food sticks in pots and pans while cooking . . . just sprinkle enough cleansing powder (such as we use in our kitchen sinks) and cover it with water. Leave the pot overnight.

By the next day, the stuck food will be all popped up, without any effort. I first tried the cleanser in dry form but the stuck food would pop up only if covered with a little water. Any cleanser will do the trick!

Mr. R. L.

PAINT PANS

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who paint their own walls with the roller type brushes and pans . . . I suggest that they line the pan with aluminum foil. When the painting is done, remove the foil and discard it . . . no pan to clean!

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

I have limited space on my drainboard so my husband nailed a breadbox to the bottom of one of our cupboards above the drainboard.

It is so much easier to reach up and open the breadbox now than it was to lean across the drainboard. It is also nice to have it up out of the way and have the extra space below.

A word of caution: If the ventilation holes in the box are covered by the wall, the bread will mold rapidly. This can be corrected by punching more holes in the bread box where the air can get in it.

We painted the box the same color as our cupboards and walls and it looks quite attractive.

Grateful

BLEACH BLACKOUT

For the ladies who drop bleach on their black dresses which leaves a white spot . . . they can go to any stationery store and buy crayons and color the spot. This can be ironed with a warm iron if applicable to the material.

E. Ison

WIRE WORK

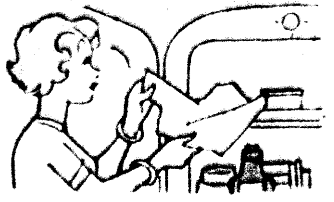
DEAR HELOISE:

I attached cup hooks to the underside of my bed. Now the cords from my electric blanket, bedside clock and lamp can be put in the cuphooks and kept out of the way of the vacuum cleaner. Be sure the cuphooks are on the underneath side of the bed and not on the finished surface.

The cuphooks hold all the wires up off the floor and this makes cleaning so much easier!

Wanda Cutsforth

FOR ICE TRAYS



DEAR HELOISE:

Cut a piece of foil a trifle larger than your ice trays and slide this into your freezer compartment of the refrigerator so that the trays sit on the foil. The trays will never stick!

L. C. Laude

DEAR HELOISE:

For mothers of little kiddies who are continually getting grass stains on their clothing . . . the easiest method I have found to remove the stains is to rub the spot with glycerin and let it stand about 45 minutes or so before washing. I find the glycerin does not leave any oil spot at all.

This product can be bought at any drug store and is also good for removing old coffee stains.

Grassy Roots

TIDY TIME

DEAR HELOISE:

For a child's crayon holder, fasten a flower frog—the type with the holes in it big enough to hold crayons—to a paper plate. Then glue a second plate to the bottom.

Fill this full of crayons so that the child can see all of the colors and keep them in the holder on her desk or work table in neat order.

Mrs. Woodrow Teets

KITCHEN EATING

DEAR HELOISE:

For a kitchen tablecloth, I find if I look in the drapery department of the department stores. I can find the nicest designs from remnants!

Most of these come 54 inches or more wide. I make a one-inch hem around the remnant. This material is heavy and a much better grade than most of us can afford to buy for the kitchen table!

Mrs. James Dart

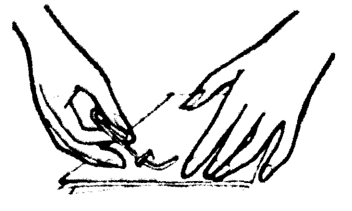
DEAR HELOISE:

The keenest way I know of to put savings stamps in books is to turn about six sheets . . . all at one time . . . face down on your drainboard and get that old bottle sprayer and "spray away"!

As this fine film of water hits the backs of the sheets of stamps, pick up the sheets and put them in the book. No messy sponges or too much water. Fast, easy and perfect!

Former Stamp Licker

EASY DOES IT



DEAR HELOISE:

Did you know that you could remove a staple without a staple-puller? All one has to do is take a paper clip, run it under the staple and pull. It comes right out every time!

Wilder

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's my contribution: For those who take lunches to work, make use of the radiators while they are hot by wrapping a cheese sandwich in foil and placing it on the radiator. Turn it at least once during the morning . . . and by noon, you will have a piping hot sandwich!

Stella McDonald

DEAR HELOISE:

I always add a little vinegar to the rinse water when washing wool skirts or sweaters . . . there will be no perspiration odor.

Alma Hanggi

DEAR HELOISE:

If milk or any other food sticks in pots and pans while cooking . . . just sprinkle enough cleansing powder (such as we use in our kitchen sinks) and cover it with water. Leave the pot overnight.

By the next day, the stuck food will be all popped up, without any effort. I first tried the cleanser in dry form but the stuck food would pop up only if covered with a little water. Any cleanser will do the trick!

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who paint their own walls with the roller type brushes and pans . . . I suggest that they line the pan with aluminum foil. When the painting is done, remove the foil and discard it . . . no pan to clean!
